Major quakes, after shocks hit Calif.

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Aftershocks rumbled through the middle of California today in the wake of two major earthquakes Sunday which rattled the state from San Diego to San Francisco.

Two persons were admitted to hospital with severe injuries as a result of Sunday's tremors. Several others were hit by falling objects, and one man fell through a window.

The quakes knocked down power lines, burst water mains, disrupted telephone service and caused rockslides throughout the area surrounding Mammoth Lakes, a popular resort 480 kilometres north of Los Angeles.

"Cars were bouncing on the ground," said Todd Jensen of Crowley Lake, about 25 km southeast of Mammoth Lakes. "Some of the people who live at the lake said their refrigerators were flipped over."

One big aftershock registering 4.7 on the Richter scale struck the Mammoth Lakes area at 5:25 a.m. today, the U.S. Seismographic Station at Berkeley, Calif., said.

No damage or injuries were reported in today's aftershocks, which seismologists at Berkeley said were occurring every two or three minutes.

Alex Cunningham, director of California's Office of Emergency Services, warned that aftershocks might continue for several days and said "people should take prudent action."

Sheriff Martin Strelneck said late Sunday that rescue teams were continuing to search the area for people stranded by slides. He said the quakes caused no major damage to the region's utilities or public buildings but did damage the roof of the local hospital.

The quake registered in California's major cities but there was no reported damage that far from the epicentre.

The first quake struck at 9:33 a.m. Sunday and registered about 6.0 on the Richter scale, said Patti Murtha of the U.S. Seismographic Station at Berkeley, Calif. After a series of aftershocks, the second quake hit at 12:45 p.m. with about equal or possibly slightly greater force, she said.

The quakes — and numerous aftershocks — brought an abrupt end to Memorial Day holiday activities at Mammoth Lakes.

"A lot of people are leaving town," said Shawna Horns of the Inyo County National Forest Visitor Centre. "The main road is jam-packed. The gas stations have long lines. All the stores are closed. Mammoth is basically closed."

He said the road to Convict Lake was closed due to the fear of more rock slides, and all 92 sites at the campground near Convict Creek were evacuated.

At the Mammoth Mountain ski area, lift chairs had to be evacuated by auxilary power, said Tony Romo.

"It shook the building pretty well but there were no injuries and just minor damage, just panels falling out of the ceiling," Romo said.

16,000 poised to flee fire

Police car blocks the Trans-Canada highway 20 kilometres east of Kenora as fire rages nearby

Times News Services

KENORA — Boats, private cars and a train were poised today to spirit 16,000 Kenora residents from the path of a forest fire burning ominously 22 kilometres from their northwestern Ontario homes, Mayor Udo Romstedt said.

To date, Kenora, 128 kilometres east of Winnipeg, has been a refuge for thousands of northern Ontario residents forced to abandon their homes to the onslaught of the many forest fires ripping through the province.

Now the front line in the battle against the fires stands just east of the town through which a steady stream of refugees still flows.

"Right now we are assisting others, and we hope we don't need assistance from others," said Romstedt. "If the winds shift to the east, we will have a more serious problem. Presently; a fire line is about 14 miles from the town of Kenora travelling with winds from the southeast."

A wind shift that provided respite to Kenora Sunday swept flames toward the Grassy Narrow Indian Reserve 80 kilometres to the northwest, forcing 450 people to flee in buses only hours before fire engulfed the only access road to the community. All 450 were taken to Kenora.

Overnight the township of Redditt and Ena, with a combined population of 250, got the order to evacuate.

"The people who came here Sunday from the Grassy Narrows band are leaving this morning for a residential school in Fort Francis (80 kilometres south of Kenora) — while the highways are still open — where they will have proper housing," Romstedt said.

He said Kenora residents were advised to keep their gas tanks full and to decide what valuables to take with them in the event of an evacuation.

"The ministry of natural resources said we would have least 24 hours notice to evacuate, and I am sure that within that time we can manage," he said.

"We have numerous boats. If the highway should be completely cut off we still could get the people out by boat," Romstedt said. "We have a good airport as well which takes big aircraft.

"And, right now we have a train standing by in case of an emergency. We don't think we would be cut off to the west."

Rain fell overnight in Kenora but fire officials say it may have done more harm than good. It was believed that lightning accompanied the rain and may have started more fires.

In Manitoba, 21 forest fires are out of control, the largest covering 190,000 acres (77,000 hectares) at Porcupine Provincial Forest near the Saskatchewan border. Provincial officials say the situation across Manitoba is generally stable after overnight rain.

B.C. forestry officials meanwhile say weekend wet weather has helped keep the province's forest fire situation stable.

Volcano ash to mud pellets

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Unpredictable, violent Mount St. Helens steamed ominously today from a seven-hour weekend eruption that spewed gritty volcanic ash over thousands of square kilometres of the most populated areas of coastal Oregon and Washington.

A light layer of ash started to settle on parts of lower Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Lower Mainland late Sunday and continued today.

The main concentrations of ash drifting north out of Washington State are at high levels and are creating no serious low-level problems in B.C.

While the light fallout is not harmful to humans or animals, persons with respiratory problems should take the precautions they normally would follow when breathing in any dusty environment, provincial emergency program officials said.

For seven hours Sunday morning, the three-kilometre-wide gaping crater of Mount St. Helens fired away like a volcanic cannon, shooting ash as high as 14 km amidst lightning flashes.

No new casualties were reported, although scientists said the eruption was the most serious since the gigantic May 18 explosion that blew off the top 700 m of the mountain and claimed at least 32 lives.

Total volcano-related losses to state and private land in Washington state reached $970.8 million, Rhonda Brooks of the state department of emergency services, said Saturday.

Earlier, it was reported $500-million worth of federal timber had been felled by the blast. And fisheries experts estimate a $200 million loss to salmon and sports fishing.

In the wake of Sunday's volcanic activity, Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray extended the restricted zone around the mountain from 8 to 32 km, including the towns of Cougar and Yale, which were evacuated.

Winds carried ashes from Sunday's eruption over an area of about 31,000 square kilometres, including Portland, Ore., and the heavily populated area around Puget Sound in Washington.

Unsafe truck clampdown on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Sunday he is stepping up enforcement of safety regulations for all commercial vehicles in the wake of a report that more than 67 per cent of the trucks travelling B.C. highways have major safety defects.

"I ordered the inspections and I was astounded at the findings," Fraser said in an interview.

"We're going to do something about it."

He said additional mechanical inspectors will be hired, and he has asked weigh scale staff to increase mechanical inspections and pay more attention to security of loads on commercial vehicles.

"We've had too many very serious accidents recorded on our roads because of insecure loads."

Fraser also said he will push for construction of motor vehicle testing stations outside the Vancouver and Victoria areas.

The report, from surprise inspections, found that of 3,619 trucks checked, 193 were too dangerous to be on the roads, and 2,252 had major safety defects.

Queen Mum's birthplace faked

LONDON (UPI) — It was a week the British royal establishment would rather forget.

As a result of a parishioner's curiosity, a spokesman had to admit that no one knows exactly where the Queen Mother was born nor why her eccentric father gave false details when he registered her birth.

Everyone agrees the Queen Mother was born on Aug. 4, 1900, and that date will be celebrated all over the nation this year to mark the 80th birthday of one of the kingdom's most popular ladies.

But the Sunday Times claims her father, the heir of the Earl of Strathmore, not only missed the six-week deadline for registering a birth but put his historic name to a lie, risking the penalty of life imprisonment which in those days was the extreme penalty for falsifying an official document.

The earl — a fanatic for plum pudding which he reputedly tried to eat every day of his life — wrongly listed his daughter as born at St. Paul's Waldenbury, the family home in Hertfordshire.

The newspaper said a local parishioner noted that the program of birthday festivities for the Queen Mother did not claim St. Pauls Walden as her birthplace but only as the place she spent much of her childhood.

His curiosity led to requests for an explanation at Clarence House, the Queen Mother's home. A spokesman there told the Sunday Times the Queen Mother was actually born in London but refused to be more specific.

Nurses return to work

Provincial government nurses returned to work today after a tentative agreement on a new contract was reached Sunday.

Details of the proposed contract are not being released but one source said it provides for a 42.9-percent wage increase over 36 months plus some fringe benefits.

Both sides are recommending acceptance. Dates for ratification votes have not been set.

The 2,700 nurses went on strike May 16 after rejecting the terms of an industrial inquiry report prepared by Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court.

The agreement was reached late Sunday night after five days of negotiations.

Lawyer Allan Hope of Prince George was named mediator last Wednesday after both sides agreed to third-party intervention.

The Hutcheon report recommended a wage increase of 26.5 per cent over two years.

Social Credit majority whittled

The Social Credit government's working majority in the legislature was whittled even thinner today after Bill Ritchie (SC-Central Fraser Valley) entered hospital with a kidney ailment.

With Speaker Harvey Schroeder also on the sick list and Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson forced to take the Chair, that leaves 28 Socreds facing 26 NDP MLAs.

The government was embarassed earlier this month when the Speaker was forced to break a 26-26 tie vote.

Liquor union to join BCGEU

About 1,600 brewery, distillery and winery workers in B.C. are on the verge of affiliation with the B.C. Government Employees Union (BCGEU).

The workers broke away about two months ago from the Toronto-based Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers.

Talks with the 43,000-member BCGEU began earlier this month and a spokesman says agreement is close.

"We've pretty well reached agreement in principle," the BCGEU's Jack Adams said today.

"All we are are doing now is tying down some of the details."

Adams said it makes sense to have the brewery workers affiliated with the BCGEU because the union already represents the province's liquor store employees.

The BCGEU has not heard any opposition to the move, Adams said, adding that the union already represents between 5,000 and 6,000 private sector employees.

The brewery workers, members of three locals, one of them representing about 100 employees at Labatts' bottling plant in Victoria, initially sought a direct charter from the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) to set up their own independent union in B.C.

But union secretary John Langley said today that, although there has been nothing official from the CLC, he has heard there is opposition to that move.

The union hasn't time to go through a lengthy hassle, he said.

The employees' contracts expired April 20 and negotiations for a new agreement are under way.

The main reason the B.C. workers broke away from the national union was because the national body insisted on country-wide bargaining whereas the B.C. members favor local negotiations.

52 S. African clerics herded into police vans

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Riot police armed with clubs and rifles today arrested a head of the South African Council ok Churches and 51 other church leaders protesting racial discrimination in the school system.

The police surrounded the clergymen and hustled them into police vans when they tried to march on the Johannesburg's police headquarters to demand the release of a colored minister detained over the weekend.

In South Africa, "colored" refers to people of mixed race.

The church leaders did not resist and sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," but government officials said spectators pelted the police with oranges and garbage and had to be dispersed with clubs. No injuries were reported.

The detainees included two women and men of all races from six separate Christian denominations. All 52 people were taken to police headquarters in John Vorster Square for questioning.

A spokesman for the Council of Churches said the association's secretary general, Bishop Desmond Tutu, and his wife, a well as the council's vice president, Rev. Peter Story, were among those arrested.

The church leaders staged their march to protest against the weekend detention of Rev. John Thorne, a highly respected mixed-race minister who threw his weight behind a month-old school boycott by Indian and mixed-race students protesting racial discrimination in the school system.

After the vans containing the hymn singing demonstrations drove away, the riot police turned on the crowd that had gathered to watch the arrests and hit several people on the back as the spectators dispersed.

On Saturday in Cape Town thousands of mixed-race high school students looted white stores and swept through busy downtown and suburban shopping malls.

The incidents were the first time since the students began a classroom boycott a month ago, that the simmering unrest spread into white areas.

Senior police spokesman Lt. Col. Leon Mellett said riot police charged about 4,000 students who were looting and damaging shops in two shopping centers in the heart of Cape Town's white business center about a half mile from Parliament.

Mellett said before police moved in, the crowd ignored orders from police officers to disperse. He said 76 people were arrested and there "were no reports of serious injuries."

But witnesses said many students were cut by glass from smashed windows and fought screaming to get out of one of the shopping centres as police moved in with riot sticks flailing.

In the white suburban areas of Goodwood and Bellville — mostly white Afrikaner residential areas on the city's northern edge — shopkeepers closed and shuttered their businesses as mulatto youths milled about. At Bellville, 29 arrests were made, Mellett said.

Mexican president talks oil in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo headed into talks with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau today aimed at a deal to trade Canadian technology for Mexican oil.

The Mexican president began a three-day state visit with an elaborate military welcome under bright skies on Parliament Hill where Mexican and Canadian flags fluttered.

Lopez Portillo arrived on the Hill by horse-drawn landau accompanied by Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer and 16 Mounties on horseback. He met dignitaries and inspected a 100-man guard of the elite 1st Airborne Division from Canadian Forces Base Petawawa while his country's national hymn was played and 21 cannon boomed a salute.

In Spanish, translated by interpreters into French and English, Lopez Portillo spoke of the common interest Canada and Mexico have in seeking new dimensions, an apparent reference to the desire of both to diverge from reliance on the overwhelming U.S. economy.

"I hope the people of Canada and the people of Mexico will be even better friends after this visit and after we have had our talks," Lopez Portillo said.

Canada has been named by Lopez Portillo along with Brazil, Spain, Sweden and Japan as some of the countries with which Mexico wants to expand relations as it develops newfound oil reserves for sale abroad and seeks industrial technology to modernize its economy.

Lopez Portillo arrived in Ottawa after a weekend in the Caribbean where he was resting after visiting France, West Germany and Sweden where he also discussed oil and trade.

Portillo planned later today to meet members of Trudeau's cabinet and to have lunch with Trudeau at his residence at 24 Sussex Drive.

He also planned to address a joint session of the Commons and Senate and to attend a special performance of Les Grand Ballets Canadiens at the National Arts Centre followed by a state dinner in his honor at Government House.

Still some hope for 8 miners

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — Rescue efforts continued today at a gold mine in northwestern Quebec amidst fears that at least three of eight trapped miners may have perished.

Claude Doire, a spokesman for Quebec provincial police, said officials of the Belmoral mine have still not given up hope that all eight miners will be found alive.

But they conceded during the weekend that there is only "one chance in a thousand" that two of the men at the 60-metre level are still alive. They also said no sign had been found of a third miner who was repairing machinery at the 75-metre level, and his chances of survival are considered slim.

There have been published reports that two more miners — for a total of five — may be dead. Doire said he had heard rumors to that effect but could not confirm them. "The company hopes all the miners are alive," he said.

It is difficult to estimate the chances of any of the men, because officials cannot be certain of the exact locations where the miners were working at the time of a cave-in last Tuesday. They can only hope some or all may have been able to take refuge in shafts or other air pockets.

St. Helens belches ash with a passion

University of Washington seismologists first reported earthquake activity on Mount St. Helens, including harmonic tremors and "seismic noises" indicating movement of underground magma, started at 2:39 a.m. Sunday with magnitudes of 4.0 on the Richter scale that quickly dropped off to less than 2.0.

Late Sunday, however, the National Weather Service sighted several plumes of ash over the peak of Mount St. Helens at 2,700 to 3,300 m.

The clouds of volcanic ash from the latest eruption were so thick early Sunday that they extended the dark several hours past the normal daybreak hour of 5:30 a.m.

Light winds, going southwest at lower levels and northwest at higher elevations, distributed the ash fallout over a fan-shaped area stretching out more than 240 km from the volcano. Visibility was impaired in a triangular area from Yakima, due east of the mountain, northwest to Cape Flattery on the coast and south to Newport, Ore.,

Drizzling rain turned the ash into splatterings of mud pellets that fell in depths of up to an inch in the western Washington communities of Kelso-Longview and Chehalis-Centralia.

The muddy debris turned highways slippery, forcing on-and-off closures of Interstate 5 in Washington. A 15-car multiple accident on the freeway at Centralia caused several serious injuries.

Electrical power transformers covered with the conductive ash shorted out. Fire engines in Kelso and Longview used their hoses to wash down power substations so that power could be restored.

The fallout also grounded helicopters at Toledo, Wash., the staging area for search and rescue and body recovery missions. Several airlines cancelled all flights out of Portland, and the Federal Aviation Administration barred instrument flights over most of the region.

During Mount St. Helen's last period of volcanic activity, it huffed and puffed for more than 20 years before going into dormancy in 1857.

Forest service staff protests

B.C. Forest Service employees demonstrated in Victoria today to express disatisfaction with the planned reorganization of the forest ministry.

The informational protest began at 11:30 a.m. in front of the office of the Government Employee Relations Bureau (GERB), 2414 Douglas.

Later in the afternoon, representatives of GERB and the B.C. Government Employees Union met to discuss the problem which led last week to about 1,000 interior and northern forest service employees walking off the job.

The dispute centres around employee disagreement and uncertainty over the planned reorganization of the ministry.

The employees claim that although the reorganization has been in the works for more than a year, GERB hasn't presented them with a clear picture of what to expect.

Areas of disagreement include classification, job security and retirement. Some forest service offices were to be closed and others relocated or reclassified.

3 FP executives fired

TORONTO (CP) — Three senior FP Publications Ltd. executives have been fired by FP's new owners, Thomson Newspapers Ltd.

FP personnel director John Egan said he, vice-president David Perks and editorial director Edwin Bolwell will lose their jobs when the FP corporate offices in Toronto close at the end of May.

The move follows the replacement of George Currie as FP president. In addition, Peter Mills, FP director of corporate development, is to move to Woodbridge Co., a holding company in the Thomson organization.

Brian Slaight, senior vice-president and general manager of Thomson Newspapers Inc., said Friday the FP group will be administered by himself, Thomson president St. Clair McCabe and executive vice-president, Margaret Hamilton.

Mid-week fare on ferries up

The B.C. Ferry Corporation has announced that effective June 1, full rate passenger fares will resume.

The off-peak passenger fare structure has been in effect for mid-week travellers during the fall, winter and spring.

There is no change to other passenger rates such as senior citizen rates, handicapped passenger rates or passenger group discounts.

Royal Oak power out

Power was knocked out in a portion of the Royal Oak area Saturday night after a car rammed a pole in the 4200-block Wilkinson Road.

Saanich police said the car had hit another vehicle and was deflected into the pole.

The two drivers, Colin Franks, 18, of 10480 All Bay Road in Sidney and Douglas Paul Anderson, 17, of 2998 Mallard received only minor injuries in the mishap which occurred at 7 p.m.

Hydro crews had to be called out to repair the pole and had service restored within about two hours.

Safecracking in Ganges

A safecracking at the Ganges elementary school over the weekend was obviously the work of amateurs, Ganges RCMP said today.

A spokesman said the thieves managed to pry open the safe but overlooked a number of envelops containing several hundred dollars, the proceeds from the sale of annual school photographs.

Several offices and classrooms were ransacked but all that appeared to be taken was $70 in cash from the principal's desk drawer.

Air Canada loses

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada reported today a net loss of $5 million in the first quarter of 1980, blaming a 27 per cent increase in operating costs.

The loss compares with net earnings of $3.6 million in the same period last year and the airline said in a statement there are "serious risks" for the rest of 1980, "with earnings now expected to be well below 1979."

Air Canada blamed fuel price increases for most of the extra costs. Operating revenue was up 22 per cent to $407.8 million, while operating expenses rose 27 per cent to $416.1 million. Net non-operating expenses were down to $600,000 from $2.3 million, due mainly to foreign exchange rates.

The Crown carrier said traffic was up 17 per cent, boosted by the popular seat sale program.

The statement added that additional cost increases could mean higher fares.

Indians say RCMP agent offered them arms

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia native leaders say they were offered money, guns and training in use of explosives in 1975, the year former undercover agent Warren Hart has testified he was given RCMP approval to give Indian militants guerrilla expertise.

But, says Bill Wilson, now president of the United Native Nations in B.C., the mysterious offers were spurned.

Both Wilson and George Watts of the West Coast tribal council say they knew then that their telephones were bugged and they were being followed.

The incidents occurred in the summer of 1975 when some Indian groups set up road blocks on reserve lands and were confronted by police. A 1978 affidavit filed with the commission investigating RCMP "tricks" in the last decade, headed by David McDonald, points to Hart as an agent working under the control and guidance of the police.

Hart told the McDonald commission at hearings in April that the idea was to set up the Indians with guns and explosives which would later be uncovered in police raids.

An offer was made to young Indians by Hart at the Mount Currie reserve, about 85 kilometres north of Vancouver, after RCMP had breached a blockade they had set up, says Gary Cristall, then a white activist who witnessed the proposal.

Cristall says in the affidavit that Hart said he could provide "unlimited supplies of high-quality military equipment, including AK-47 automatic rifles, dynamite and plastic explosives." Hart also offered to train the native people, Cristall adds.

But he added that Hart, who went by the name of Clay Heart in the encounter, was regarded as crazy or a provocateur.

Wilson says he did not see the meeting with Hart, but did reject proposals by others who approached him with similar schemes for arms training and the bombing of hydro transmission lines.

Wilson, then a graduate from law school at the University of British Columbia, said he was approached by an "aging hippie" who used an American Express credit card.

"He asked how would I like to have enough money to set up a law practice and get out of the Indian business," says Wilson. The man first proposed $100,000, raised the figure to $300,000 and later, at a meeting in Nova Scotia, jumped it to $600,000.

Watts says he was approached in the same way.

"I was asked about taking a good job in government. There was talk about some real good jobs going," says Watts.

"I don't know who made the approaches, but I'd get phone calls from people who didn't identify themselves, suggesting there were opportunities for me if I watch for them."

Both Wilson and Watts recalled trying a test to see if their telephones were being bugged. They discussed on the telephone a phony blockade on the Tofino road on Vancouver Island.

Then they went out to check the road and found 40 police in riot gear waiting for something to happen.

'Cinderella' ferry emerges to cruise northern waters

VANCOUVER (CP) — Last seen in public in November — unwanted and unused for two years — the Queen of Surrey was the Cinderella of the B.C. ferry fleet.

"The materials and the use of those materials are the most advanced I have ever seen — but we take no credit for that. That belongs to her owners. She's going to be a credit to the B.C. Ferry Corp. — like a P & O liner, only better."

The Queen of the North now undergoes a shakedown cruise up the B.C. coast and Thursday, if the shakedown is problem free, will leave Tsawwassen for Prince Rupert on the first scheduled trip of the summer, with stops at Port Hardy, Bella Bella and Ocean Falls.

From June 1 the ferry will leave Port Hardy for Prince Rupert every other day. Fares are $45 for a passenger one way and $60 for an average-size car. Staterooms will cost from $8.25 to $17.25 a berth, based on double occupancy.

Jones said the final cost of the conversion, which included new staterooms, lounges, cafeterias, restaurants and a children's playroom, has not been tabulated, but expects it will be within the limits of the contract which was signed for just under $7½ million.

The ferry, which has a capacity of 1,040 passengers and 157 cars, also has been fitted with a modern sewage treatment plant.

Built in Germany in 1969, the vessel began as the Stena Danica, offering day cruises on the Baltic. Bought by the NDP government in 1974, it was renamed the Queen of Surrey, but was mothballed a few years later when the Social Credit party returned to government, because the vessel was considered uneconomic.

When the decision was made to take the aging Princess Marguerite off the summer Seattle-to-Victoria run and use the Queen of Prince Rupert (now the Victoria Princess) the ferry corporation decided to convert the much larger Queen of Surrey for the northern run.

Straight from MLAs?

VERNON (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said Saturday he expects a motion to allow live broadcasts of the B.C. legislature will be introduced before the next provincial election.

The former broadcaster, speaking to a regional convention of the Radio-Television News Directors Association, also predicted there will be live broadcasts of legislatures across Canada in five years.

Nielsen said he thought broadcasts of proceedings might begin soon after a new B.C. legislative assembly meets after the next election, which would be about two or three years from now.

The minister also told the news directors that political reporters should be trained to understand the parliamentary system before they're assigned to cover a legislature.

He proposed a meeting in Victoria between the association and MLAs to discuss the relationship between reporters and legislators.

Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) told the broadcasters it is important to distinguish between subjectivity and objectivity in reporting.

Lea said radio and television stations should consider broadcasting editorial packages to give their audiences an indication of their biases.

The most dangerous reporter is one who thinks he's objective, said Lea, adding that he doubts anybody has ever met an objective person.

Reports affect labor disputes?

VERNON (CP) — Labor relations mediator Hugh Ladner said Saturday that reporters can upset the balance of sensitive bargaining negotiations in labor disputes.

The manner in which a dispute is reported could have a serious impact on the dispute, Ladner told the regional convention of the Radio and Television News Directors Association of Canada.

He said public sympathy toward a union often is created by news reports because the union might speak to the reporters and the company might not.

In some cases, he said, a dispute could have been settled earlier if that sympathy hadn't been created.

The labor expert also cautioned reporters to be careful not to be duped by one of the parties in the dispute which might attempt to affect the course of negotiations through media coverage.

Four die in plane crash

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Two RCMP constables and a Halifax couple died Saturday when a Cessna 172 crashed in rugged terrain near Lindeman Lake, about 40 kilometres east of here.

Dead are Darwin James Flemming, 35, of Port Coquitlam, and Andrew Ronald Thibeau, 30, of Fort Langley, both constables with the Langley RCMP detachment, and Robert and Patricia Thibeau of Halifax.

Police said the aircraft went down while on a pleasure flight.

SFU links with KCTS

BURNABY (CP) — Television station KCTS, the Public Broadcasting System's Seattle outlet, and Simon Fraser University have reached a tentative affiliation agreement.

The agreement is to be ratified Tueesday by the university's board and reviewed Friday by the station's advisory board.

University spokesman Margit Nance said Sunday the agreement means KCTS will have an institutional base in B.C. located at Simon Fraser paralleling its own headquarters at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Under the agreement, the station will set up an office at SFU with a staff of three or four.

Key question unanswered

The five members of Victoria city council who supported the location of the convention centre on the Reid site made a number of useful points in defending their position.

They talked passionately about the economic benefits a conference centre would bring to Victoria, about the jobs it would provide for young people, about the boost it would give the tourist industry. They were quite right.

They said vehemently that ill-supported claims of conflicts of interest in the development of the centre should not affect the final vote on the zoning amendment allowing the centre. Right again.

They said that the procedures used in developing the centre might not have been the best (a remark that should win an award for understatement of the week), but that they could still be improved before the centre opens and, in any case, had nothing to do with the land-use decision council was being asked to make. Right again.

They said they liked the design (surely a pure matter of opinion), and that the Provincial Capital Commission was working on improving it further. All quite true.

They answered, in fact, every question that had been raised by opponents of the centre except one, the only one that really matters: is it essential that the convention centre be built on one of the most valuable and distinctive waterfront sites remaining in Victoria?

Almost no one opposes the general principle of a convention centre for Greater Victoria. Its benefits, however, would come whether it was built on the Reid site or on a less sensitive site away from the water.

Questions of financing, management, and conflict of interest are of great concern when the operating agreements for the centre come up, but will arise no matter where the centre is located. Design too is an element to be considered for any convention centre site.

The only reason the supporters of the site can give for their choice is that the waterfront views will enhance the attractiveness of the centre and make it easier to market to convention planners.

This may be a bit of a bonus for the centre operators, but it is far from essential as was clearly proved at the public hearing that preceded the council decision.

A former manager of the Penticton Peach Bowl convention centre waxed eloquent about the tremendous economic benefits the centre had brought to the Okanagan town, how busy it was, and how much it had improved the local tourist industry. Under questioning, however, he admitted that the Peach Bowl is not in Penticton's downtown and is not even within walking distance of its waterfront.

As regional board chairman Jim Campbell put it, convention delegates spend their time working at meetings. They do not need "a choice view lot" to conduct their affairs.

Is the small bonus in marketing that the waterfront location will provide worth the alienation of such a valuable piece of property as the Reid site? Surely not.

Council has given the green light for the convention centre development to begin, but the Provincial Capital Commission can still hold it up. The commission can order a site review and can search out another location that will still be close to downtown amenities but will be on a less sensitive piece of property.

It should do so immediately.

Land grab

Good grief, the Yukon has shrunk by 10 per cent.

In a matter of minutes, the northern territory lost 10,776 square miles. Faster than a speeding sucessionist, and without even a referendum.

For years Statistics Canada listed the Yukon as 207,076 square miles. That's 536,325 square kilometres for the metric buffs.

However, Y. Jim Lee, a remote sensing specialist with the Pacific Forest Research Centre in Victoria, was rummaging through a few computer banks one day and found that the size of the Yukon was actually smaller than recorded. Lee was acutally working on new computer designs for the storage and retrieval of information.

The record books have since been changed to show the that the caribou and wolves have only 186,300 square miles over which to roam.

Having tidied up the Yukon, perhaps Lee and his computer can take a look at Ottawa's bureaucracy. It would be nice to hear that it really isn't as gargantuan as the records say.

WALTER STEWART

Panacea for conservation?

OTTAWA — A key element in Canadian energy policy is the assumption that gasoline prices must go higher to promote conservation.

Jack up prices, the argument goes, and people will drive less. That will allow Canada to import less foreign oil, balance its energy books and roll into a brighter tomorrow.

The department of energy, in its "Background to a New Energy Strategy," put the point succinctly: "Higher prices of (motor gasoline) are closely related to lower consumption."

When he was finance minister, John Crosbie enshrined this conclusion (backwards) in his budget. He was giving us an 18-cents-a-gallon excise tax, Crosbie said, because "low prices have led to excessive consumption." He calculated that higher prices, and some tinkering with other policy measures, would save the nation as much as 100 million barrels of oil annually.

Liberal policy

When the Liberals took over, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde backed away from the 18-cents-a-gallon excise tax, but supported higher prices, without ever saying how much higher was high enough. He also accepted the underlying assumption that paying more leads to driving less.

Oh yeah?

In France, the price of gasoline has tripled since the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, and the French are now paying 13 francs and up per gallon — $3.65 in Canadian funds. To fill the tank of a Citroen costs $75, and to run even a small car like a Renault costs the equivalent of 47 cents a mile.

Yet there are 22 per cent more cars on the roads of France than there were before the embargo; gasoline and diesel fuel consumption are up by more than one-fifth, and the average French driver is putting 8,400 miles per year on his car, up from 7,800 in 1973.

In West Germany, where gasoline sells for $2.87 a gallon, consumption rose 16 per cent between 1976 and 1979.

In Britain, where the going rate is $2.72, consumption is up 10 per cent in the same period.

All across Europe, despite a doubling in fuel prices, car ownership has gone up over the past two years — by 10 per cent in Belgium and Italy, 12 per cent in Austria and 13 per cent in Norway and West Germany.

In Canada, gasoline consumption has risen steadily in tandem with OPEC increases, but our energy experts insist this is because the prices have not risen as fast as inflation. Gas cost 42 cents a gallon in 1955 and $1.02 a gallon in 1978 but, the Background to a New Energy Strategy argues, "Canadians now pay less for gasoline, in real terms, than they did in the 1950s."

The oil import subsidy, which brings imported fuel costs down to the level of domstic oil, has eased the pain. In the United States, where consumers were not so sheltered from international developments, costs at the pump have doubled since the beginning of 1979, and consumption is down by five per cent.

To get the same results — our gasoline consumption rose four per cent last year — Canadians will have to apply the same remedy, the energy department argues.

In short, there is a flat contradiction between the European experience and the American one, and Canadian policy is based on the assumption that we will follow the U.S. pattern.

However, another explanation is possible, one that suggests the payoff from a higher-price policy may be nasty, brutish and short.

In Europe, the move towards more fuel-efficient cars began decades ago, mass transit is highly developed and two-car families are a rarity. The opportunities to respond to higher prices are fewer, and the gains to be made smaller.

In the United States and Canada, mass transit is minimal, large cars common and both car ownership and mileage driven are much higher than in Europe. Every fourth family in Britain owns a car, and every third one in France, while six out of every seven households in Canada own at last one car, and nearly one out of every three families owns two or more. Since the energy crisis began in 1973, Canadian car ownership has climbed from 7.8 million to 9.7 million, a leap of 24 per cent.

It is easier for our affluent society to conserve, because the level of waste is higher. The psychological shock of an abrupt price increase is likely to persuade us, at least at first, to walk to the corner for a pack of cigarettes, instead of driving. In Europe, they already walk.

In time, however, we are likely to react much as the Europeans have done.

The car is no longer regarded as a luxury on this continent; it is central to our way of life. We have been willing to sacrifice almost anything — money, open spaces, even the quality of the air we breath — to support our insolent chariots. If North Americans do not flinch at the loss of 50,000 lives annually under car wheels, why should we cut back for a mere matter of dollars?

In Europe, the long-term reaction to higher prices has been for those who could protect themselves to do so. Workers demanded higher wages, managers demanded a company car.

Company cars

In France, one-sixth of late-model cars belong to companies, in Britain, 43 per cent of new cars sold in 1979 were delivered to companies for the use of management and white-collar workers.

It is only a matter of time before our unions, and their bosses, make car-support, like Medicare, part of a negotiating package.

There is a strong likelihood that increased gas prices will have a sharp, but temporary, effect on consumption, after which the long-term trend to increased ownership, use and abuse of the automobile will reassert itself, giving inflation's tail another twist.

To build an energy policy on the hope that ballooning prices will right the nation appears dubious at best, and at worst akin to trying to locate a gas leak with a lighted candle.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Avoiding an economic cure

If this were the imaginary world of Adam Smith and his unerring market place, the troubles of the North American automobile industry would not disturb our governments and the Chrysler Corporation would go quietly broke without a whimper.

If we had even begun to grasp the consequences of the world's energy crisis the falling rate of automobile production would be regarded as good news. For the cars already on the road are more than we can afford, and our oil supplies can sustain, in the long run.

If the myth of the super-efficient North American economy were true, the competitive goods of foreigners would be welcomed in these times of super-inflation.

Laws ignored

Unfortunately, or fortunately, Smith's imaginary world has never existed and the market is not unerring. When a company as big as Chrysler goes broke the state must preserve it and its innocent workers. In a peculiar irony, Herb Gray, the great evangelist of Canadian nationalism, rushes to the rescue of an American corporation that preached and ignored the laws of free enterprise.

For a long time, a century at least, the system in North America operated on the illusion of unlimited supply from a continent of treasure. When the once abundant oil reserves of the United States diminished there still seemed to be no cause for alarm, no reason to curtail demand. Plenty of cheap oil could be purchased in the Middle East until, suddenly, the world's richest nation found its prosperity, its collective life, and its military power dependent on a cartel.

Hardly noticed at all, something else was happening. The United States had exported its unequalled technology to foreigners and they eagerly grasped and improved it. Now, in such sophisticated industries as automobiles, they are more efficient than the original inventors.

It is almost unbelievable, but true, that the American economy has failed in the last year to increase its productivity, its output of goods and services per man-hour of work — this while productivity was growing fast in Germany, Japan, and even in some nations of the backward Third World.

Since there can be no increase of real wealth (as distinguished from the fool's gold of inflation) without higher productivity, the system needs rethinking and, in its weak sectors, rebuilding. But the powerful interest groups of business, labor, agriculture, and others will resist basic change when they can always count on the charity of the state, the money of the taxpayers, and the inflated prices paid by the consumers.

Too many sectors of the continental economy are becoming too rigid, fat, and lazy for a changing, flexible world and no government is yet prepared to tackle the rigidities, the incipient arthritis of the system. All governments prefer easier, ad hoc remedies and quick fixes like the Chrysler rescue.

Business expects ever-rising profits, labor ever-rising wages, the public an ever-rising standard of life. Along with Smith's imaginary world the old notion that a reduction of costs would benefit everybody is forgotten. Even in slack industries, like automobiles and construction, the costs keep rising when the products can't be sold.

Not only Chrysler but governments, private managers, and all of us have miscalculated and tried to escape the new worldwide climate. The ad hoc remedies of tight money, subsidies, loans, tariffs, import quotas, and what a bewildered American president calls the moral equivalent of war have produced nothing better than the prodigy of inflation and recession which, in the world of Smith, would be impossible.

Direct controls

What next? Quite possibly another attempt to pump up the United States economy for the November election, another inflationary surge and then, despite all promises to the contrary, another experiment with direct controls unlikely to succeed. Anything to avoid a real cure for economic rheumatism.

But our system has not repealed the law of supply and demand. Neither has the communist system. And the law will suit the immediate beneficiaries in the OPEC cartel just fine — until their supplies run out.

Victoria Landmarks

Present owners of parts of that large section still see the number 51 on their property tax forms. For in 1861 British Columbia adopted the Torrens principle of land registration used in Australia.

Irish-born Torrens emigrated from Britain to South Australia in 1839. He became successively collector of customs, colonial treasurer, registrar general, legislator. In 1858 he secured passage of a landholding reform, the Torrens Act. This substituted public registration (holding by title rather than deed) for the old, complicated conveyance system.

In May 1860, the Victoria Gazette several times praised the South Australian way of registering titles as quick, cheap, simple and certain.

Deputy Registrar H. L. Robinson of the Victoria Land Registry Office gave many more details of the Torrens system in an article in the 1947 Report of the Corporation of B.C. Land Surveyors. He stated that the Torrens system was based on the method of registering ownership in ships.

British Columbia, introducing the start of the Torrens system in its very first Land Registry Act, led North America.

Collecting debt

The only thing this indicates is that B.C. is covetted and vulnerable, to be sucked into taking on more debt, and more loans, so that we will have to pay the New York moneychangers more and more interest. — Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

Hospital problems

My mother is in hospital in Victoria, and I called in to see her one lunchtime last week. She was trying to eat her lunch, but as she is blind, and her hands are badly crippled with arthritis, she was reduced to trying to eat with her fingers. "Where are the nurses or aides who should be helping?" you ask. They were busy trying to serve trays and feed the rest of the people on that ward, most of them elderly, some with stroke damage. The ratio seemed to be one nurse or aide to eight patients sometimes more.

Good diet and nourishment are of great importance in recovery from illness; yet we have a situation in our hospitals where meals are a dreaded ordeal for a large number of people. The nurses on the wards are so short staffed that they only have time to do the bare essentials, hardly time to ask how a patient is feeling, certainly no time to provide the little human kindnesses which made nursing such a rewarding career at one time.

We are currently building a new Children's Hospital in Vancouver, a new acute care hospital in Victoria. We have a C.A.T. scanner, and a whole range of sophisticated diagnostic and treatment aids for the specialists who care for our health.

None of this is worth a tinker's damn if the basic, human needs of sick people cannot be met at the ward level. The R.N.'s, practical nurses and aides all know this, but if they object to the lack of staffing they are told, "This is your quota, you must make do with that." I wonder if that is the reply given to a deputy minister if he needs another typist on his staff.

Our family has had to deal with a lot of illness over the past six years. In all that time I have never met a deliberately neglectful or careless nurse or aide. But I have seen staffing cut back, back and back. The nurses themselves are frustrated, the hospital administrations must know that the level of care is slipping. I feel very strongly that the government and the people of B.C. must seriously re-assess their priorities.

Anthropologists will tell you that they measure a society's degree of civilization by the care it gives its old, weak or sick members. We may be a technically sophisticated civilization, but if we neglect human needs for care, comfort and security in order to "hold the line" on a budget, while at the same time we spend money on non-essentials, or hoard a budget surplus, or plan a lavish B.C. Place, then our degree of civilization is very definitely in question. — Hazel M. Bowman, 5190 Del Monte Avenue.

Eradicate disease

Re: the news item "Smallpox out — other diseases on firing line" (Times, May 9):

Eradication of smallpox from the face of our earth was indeed the greatest achievement of the 1970s. It took millions of lives every year. The cure, control, vaccination for travelling, quarantine facilities around the world, etc. cost us billions of dollars every year. But it cost UN only $200 million to launch all out efforts to eradicate this dreadful disease! This great success of the UN is worthy of our applause. How often UN is wrongfully accused of "operating an ambulance at the bottom of a cliff instead of putting fences on top of the cliff".

United Nation's declaration of war on tropical diseases, immunization against polio, tuberculosis, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, diphtheria, polluted waters, poor sanitation, etc. will perhaps be our greatest achievement of the 1980s and does deserve our full moral and financial support. — B. WILLIAM SAFIRE on language

Going to the well

Well, here goes.

I interviewed Ronald Reagan and came away with the impression that he begins every answer with the word "well." The interjection of a meaningless word or phrase to help a respondent fill the sound vacuum as he arranges his thoughts is hardly new: In 1968, one presidential candidate began many answers with "golly" while the other preferred, "Let me say this about that." President Carter eschews all this verbalized throat clearing, preferring a straightforward, if immodest, "I and my advisers." (Unlike his opponent-to-be, Carter doesn't dig "wells.")

"Well" — originally "it is well" — is the only exclamation or interjection capable of expressing a range of emotions from satisfaction to puzzlement to indignation to resignation. To confirm the suspicion that a Reagan presidency would be studded with "wells," I have analyzed a Wall Street Journal interview with the candidate, and can report that Governor Reagan uses the interjection with all its nuances:

The "well" that says, "Now hold on a minute." To the Journal question about a large tax cut, Reagan replied: "Well, I would want a lot more study of that."

The well that pleads, "Give me a second to get my thoughts in order." If you couldn't get a spending cut, would you still want to cut taxes? Reagan: "Well, to begin with . . . " you give direct aid to the Somalis?" Reagan: "Well, now here again, you're running the risk . . . "

The dry, "I understand your question" well. Journal: "Would

REAGAN . . . vacuum filler

The "Gee, now, you've got me all wrong" well. Asked about a blockade of Cuba to retaliate for Soviet moves in Afghanistan, he replied: "Well, I've suggested that hypothetically . . . "

The exclamatory well that asserts, "Now hear this." To a question about how we can help our allies who are dependent on Middle East oil, Reagan welled up with a strong "Well, maybe we could be of more help to them than we are right now."

The abandoned well that says, "I'm sorry I ever showed up for this interview." Asked if he had ruled out a running mate who did not support his tax-cut position, he said, "Well, let me say . . . I regretted saying it."

In all the above, the transcriber punctuated the deliciously varied "wells" with a comma, which was a disservice to the reader. Different "wells" have different spells:

Well? The question mark turns the word into "So? What's next? I'm standing here patiently waiting for a complete explanation."

Wellwellwell. The run-on says, "Imagine that. Who'd a thunk it?"

We-e-ell . . . This stretched version says, "Now you're getting into sensitive areas, and it's inappropriate for a member of the Appropriations Committee to confer approbation . . . "

Wa-all. Western version: "Shucks, partner, I'm too modest for that . . . "

Well. The period turns the word into a door-slamming sentence: "We're finished. That's it. Mail me the cat."

Well . . . With the dotty ellipsis trailing despondently behind, the word conjures up the vision of a statesman walking around the circular park behind the White House, contemplating the loneliest job in the world. This is the "well" of loneliness.

Columnist Mary McGrory recently honed in on all the latest campaign cliches — from "negatives" (formerly "minuses") to "volatility" ("The damn voters surprised us again") to "skewed." (" 'Skewed' began appearing on Kennedy managers' lips early on," Miss McGrory wrote, presumably using the voguish Britishism "early on" ironically. "The Iowa results were 'skewed' by the hostage situation.")

Then she came to my favorite: " 'Honing in' is having a good run. George Bush, having had a brief and passionate attachment to 'Big Mo' (momentum) after Iowa, belatedly began to 'hone in' on the issues. The press has recently been 'honing in' — formerly known as 'zeroing in' — on Reagan's cavalier way with facts. Kennedy was extremely grateful that reporters were diverted in this wise. For several months, his slips of the tongue and pauses had undergone a 'honing in' of exceptional severity."

The noun "hone" comes from the Greek word for "cone" and refers to a whetstone, a material used for sharpening knives and tools. As a verb, the word means "to sharpen." Emphasis can be added with "hone down," a phrase President Carter used in a recent press conference: To "hone down" is to "sharpen up."

The phrase "to hone in on" is a mistake. The confusion is based on "to home in," or "to home in on," used by pilots or radio operators who wish to follow an electronic beam or signal to a destination.

You can "hone," or sharpen, your arguments, or you can "home in" — with an "M" — on an issue, but you cannot "hone in on the issues." The expression is a hopeless mishmash. Evidently Bush wanted to say "home in," or to use the rifle term "zero in," and mixed it up with "honing down," or refining, his points of view. Out came "hone in on," and nobody asked what it meant. Sounded good.

I hate to horn in on the fun, but be it ever so humble, there's no phrase like "hone in on."

Chello again

A person who signs his name "T. Jefferson, Monticello, Virginia" takes me to task for suggesting that the local townsfolk pronounce his home with an "S." In fact, he insists, the name in Virginia has always had the Italian pronunciation preferred by the owner of an estate in that area: "Montichello."

The letter is a hoax. I know that because no such town as Monticello, Va., exists. The nearest town is Charlottesville; Monticello is the name of an estate once owned by a founding father, and is pronounced by Virginians with a "ch."

Monticello, N.Y., is a town that pronounces itself with an "S." All clear, T. Jefferson?

Other shibboleths that have been dribbling in (enough, already) include Marin County, Calif., which the outlanders call "MAR-in," but the locals floating in their hot tubs call "Muh-RIN"; the cities in Canada that Americans call "Tor-ON-to" and "Kwa-BECK," but Canadians call "TRON-na" and "Kuh-BECK," and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the last part pronounced "Berry" by outlanders and "Bahr" — as in the first syllable of "barren" — by natives. (But in Vermont, Barre is called "Barry" by natives, and "Bar" by outsiders.)

From Hong Kong, my Times colleague Joseph Sterba points out that "Bangladesh" begins with an "ong" sound, as in "Hong Kong." "It is 'Bhangla-desh' — not 'Bang,' as in the way the world ends." In a whimper, he adds a note about Afghanistan's Kabul: "It's 'COB-ble,' not 'Ca-BOOL,' " and cautions against an unconscious lisp on the modern name of Siam: "It's 'Tie-land,' not 'Thigh-land.' "

From The Minneapolis Tribune's editor, Charles Bailey, comes a correction: Montevideo, Minn., is neither "Montevi-DAY-o" nor "Montevi-DEE-o," but "Monte-VID-eo." (Place must have great television reception.)

From his ubiquitous camper somewhere "on the road" for CBS, correspondent Charles Kuralt reports: "Beaufort, on the coast of my home state, North Carolina, is 'BO-f'rt.' But Beaufort, another town in South Carolina, is 'BEW-f'rt.' It's 'El Do-RAY-do,' Ark., but 'El Do-RAH-do,' Calif."

Kuralt adds a classic put-down of the arrogance of outsiders: "A man told me that he and his wife stopped for lunch in Mexia, Tex., and, unsure of how to pronounce the name of the town, he asked the waitress, 'Would you say, very slowly, the name of this place we're in?' She said, 'Sure. 'Daaairy Queeeeen.' "

Beggars in paradise

By PETER DEELEY
London Observer

NASSAU — Away from the glitter of this international holiday resort live an unwanted people. In shanty towns and "repatriation" camps, thousands of Haitian boat people eke out a meagre and illegal existence, living on the unskilled jobs which Bahamians consider beneath them.

These are the Haitian refugees who cannot afford to bribe a boatman for the onward journey to Florida. Of the thousands who set off from Haiti on the 500-mile journey here in their tiny boats, many do not arrive. The bodies of more than 80, many mutilated by sharks, have been washed up in the blue waters of Nassau in the past two years.

Periodically the government rounds up 500 or 1,000 and deports them, but these operations cost about $100,000 a year for the charter of planes and boats, so they happen only spasmodically.

The 40,000 boat people — 17 per cent of the Bahamas' population — are considered a threat to the yearly influx of 1.7 million tourists. Prime Minister Lynden Pindling is considering asking for international assistance to deal with the flood: "It is becoming too much for us to bear. We can't afford to carry the whole bill by ourselves."

The U.S. is struggling with the moral dilemma of whether to grant political asylum to the 30,000 Haitians in Miami, but there is no such crisis of conscience here.

"These people are economic and not political refugees," a government spokesman said. "We send them back and they turn up again in another boat a few weeks later. They never ask us for political asylum. They come here to find work and earn money and send most back by registered post every week to their families in Haiti."

The Haitians are kept well out of sight to avoid upsetting the package holidaymakers, gamblers, film stars and Mafia racketeers who come here to enjoy their $200-a-day suites.

Until recently, boat people awaiting deportation were kept on Atholl Island, close to Paradise Island, Nassau's most luxurious holiday playground. Now the Atholl Island centre has been closed.

Haiti meanwhile continues to ignore all international demands to prevent the refugee exodus. The country, one of the poorest in the world, is at such a low ebb that it desperately needs the money its fugitives send home.

Last month the Human Rights Commission of the Organization of American States appealed to the world to give economic aid to Haiti, so that living conditions can be improved. It attacked the repression of 'Baby Doc' Duvalier's regime and listed hundreds of men tortured and murdered in his prisons.

B.C. Heroin use drops

By JOHN CLARKE

VANCOUVER — Buried in the latest statistics about rising crime in British Columbia is the startling information that the illegal heroin problem is on the way down.

There have been no banner headlines, no optimistic statements by the government or the police, no assurances that the law enforcement agencies have found the key to what has in the past been described as B.C.'s greatest social evil. Yet the number of heroin offences dropped last year by a whopping 70.5 per cent.

The writers of the B.C. Police Commission's report on over-all crime did mention the drug statistics along with a lot of other figures, but they seemed to wring their hands a lot more about the fact that British Columbia now is third in Canada on the crime rate charts (116.2 offences per 1,000 population), behind only the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Except for the heroin figures, which must please everybody. And yet nobody is taking a lot of credit for the turnaround, if it is a genuine turnaround. You never know with the illict heroin trade because it fluctuates like any free trade market. But the fact that the number of heroin offences dropped from 824 to 243 last year (70.5 per cent) compared with a drop of just over 5 per cent in total drug offences has got to mean something significant.

The police will only say that illegal heroin went into short supply after the number of high-profile drug arrests that led to a number of big court cases. Some of those trials cost more than $1 million each and there's no doubt that they cracked, if not broke, some of the drug rings.

But British Columbia is supposed to have between 10,000 and 15,000 heroin addicts, most of them in the Lower Mainland, and the big question is: What are they doing for their daily ration? Have they suddenly cured themselves of their habit? Have they gone elsewhere?

Nobody seems to want to venture even a guess, although it is a curiosity that the new statistics occurred in the middle of the controversy last year over the provincial government's attempt to introduce compulsory treatment for addicts. The program was struck down as illegal and won't be resurrected.

What is probably at the back of most people's minds here is that the heroin problem has been so pervasive in B.C. society for so long that 1979 may have been just a temporary respite. If it's more than that people don't want to say too much for fear of scaring away the good omens.

2nd Star Wars a hit

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Executives at 20th Century-Fox are ecstatic at the receipts from The Empire Strikes Back, the sequel that made more first-night money at the box office than its parent film, Star Wars.

"We never thought it would beat Star Wars . . . This is unbelievable," a company executive said of the $1.3 million taken at 125 theatres where the film made its debut Wednesday.

That was double the opening night revenues of box office record-setter Star Wars.

But the studio spent more than double their money to make The Empire. Star Wars production cost $10 million and The Empire Strikes Back cost $25 million three years later.

Star Wars, with box office receipts of more than $300 million so far, is the biggest movie money-maker of all time.

Two 'artists' worthy of that expression

By AUDREY JOHNSON

We tend to apply it to anyone who is involved with some art form, when actually it should belong only to the person who has earned it not just by talent, but through dedication and solid application.

The weekend audiences at McPherson Playhouse were treated to that kind of artistry.

First, on Friday and Saturday, Canadian actor Barry Morse held his listeners spellbound with his one-man show — a superb roster of characterizations and impressions linked with the appealing skill of a raconteur.

Insight and keen observation couched in terms of polished craftsmanship left nobody in doubt as to the calibre of this dramatic artist who will guide the fortunes of the Globe Theatre enterprise, if and when it becomes financially viable.

Then on Sunday, a full house heard pianist May-Ling Kwok in recital. This young musician whose talent first flowered vigorously under the tuition of Robin Wood, is now a prized student of the great Hungarian teacher, Gyorgy Sebok in Indiana.

And she is beyond doubt, an artist in the truest meaning of the word.

Her program explored first the untrammeled ways of Mozart — the 10 Variations for Piano — and Beethoven — the less frequently heard Sonata in A-flat Major Op. 110; followed by Debussy's shimmering L'Isle Joyeuse.

In the second half May-Ling tackled the virtuoso repertoire with, besides the demanding Liszt Mephisto Waltz, again the non-cliched Chopin Polonaise-Fantaisie in A-flat Major Op. 61, and Liszt's Etudes d'execution transcendante.

Besides being a picture of grace and ease at the piano, May-)ing is a study in total musical concentration.

There is no effort apparent in performance of the most demanding technical passages in such as the Mephisto, while at the same time she is able to feel beneath the keyboard display to evolve musicianly qualities that are often missed.

In other words, the sensitivity of this artist affects everything she does. Her touch is caressing, delicate, or strong and forceful but the tone she produces is always lovely. The music flows in shapely phrases, cleanly and intelligently pedalled.

In the complex Mozart Variations, there was fine precision and color and the Beethoven combined style with a richness of expression and subtlties of tone that stressed the artist's insight and maturity.

Opening old school section cuts crowding

Crowding at Cloverdale Elementary School may be relieved in time for resumption of classes in the fall if the provincial fire marshal allows partial reopening of its 59-year-old section.

A new building now in the design stage will not be ready for at least another year and portable classrooms had been deemed necessary to meet teaching requirements.

School District 61 secretary-treasurer Carl Warner was given preliminary approval from the regional fire commissioner to partially re-open the 1921 building for one year after upgrading work.

Chapel designated as heritage defies Royal Jubilee bulldozers

The 1909-vintage Pemberton Chapel stands in the way of a major expansion plan for the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

At the rear of the hospital's kitchen block, it was recently designated a heritage building and is located where the first phase of reconstruction for the hospital is expected to begin.

Members of the Capital Regional District's hospital and health planning commission were told last week that the estimated cost of moving the chapel to a different location is $100,000. The Heritage Trust Fund, however, has offered only $5,000 for the job.

Mrs. Joseph Despard Pemberton donated the brick-and-Douglas fir chapel to the hospital.

Royal Jubilee Hospital board chairman Eric Simmons says he would like to see the $100,000 come out of the hospital's capital expenditure budget.

Deputy hospital planner Bill Pennington says the cost of moving the chapel had not been included in estimates for reconstruction of the hospital because the building was not designated heritage at the time. The building was designated after planning was in progress.

Commission member Howard Drummond said the quickest way to get action would be to announce the chapel will be torn down unless somebody moves it. Other commission members, however, agreed other routes should be studied first.

In addition to approaching private sources, B.C. Hospital Programs will be asked if additional funds can be added to the capital budget. The Council of Churches will also be asked to take an interest in the project.

Patriotic — or is it?

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper says a new brand of cigarette, called Let's Have a Smoke, is using patriotic lures to attract customers while Soviet health officials continue to campaign against smoking.

Hardy ferns are ideal for those shaded areas

A shaded neglected corner in a garden will respond to a few hours work and loving care. If it is planted suitably for its location it is likely that the upkeep is very little during the year, and there's always the chance of its becoming a favorite spot to visit.

First must be attention to cleaning out unwanted grass roots and other weedy plants. Next work over the soil to find out what it needs.

If near the house foundation, the soil may be as poor as the day the builder backfilled over discarded debris. This means work. To lessen the amount of work you may settle for preparing a few pockets for planting, for what I have in mind is mainly growing hardy ferns.

The shaded area may be beneath high and spreading branches of a tree; this too can be made attractive with ferns.

Prepare a few pockets with soil from the compost heap and very old manure if you have it; or leafmould; or failing all these, use coarse peatmoss well soaked and mixed with garden soil.

It may be that you have a hardy outdoor fern or two already on the property. They have a way of turning up especially on lots recently brought under cultivation from woodland. Failing these free plants you will need to buy one or two from a nursery which has taken the trouble to propagate these lovely plants.

Once you begin growing ferns they may well "grow on you," for their beauty and variety is almost beyond belief. Variations occur from natural propagation in your garden from sporelings so that something new turns up when you don't expect it.

Some ferns remain green until the first hard frost around the new year so that withered fronds are left to protect the crowns from freezing snow and rain. Not until spring is on the way and new growth advanced is it advisable to remove old fronds. These can either be kept in a special little heap to rot down or laid just beneath adjoining soil areas to enrigh the soil with the ferns' own humus. They do not take kindly to fertilizer, but do like and need humus. That is why in nautre they grow where much humus is produced annually from surrounding trees.

Accompanying color plants should be kept to a minimum for ease of maintenance but there should be no lack of beauty if columbines are allowed to grow as they will throughout the fern area.

These plants, listed as aquilegias in catalogues and most garden books, may be either the long spurred hybrids of many pastel and vivid colors, or a one-colored species such as Aquilegia caerulea. The latter is a foot high, lovely, dark violet blue with short curved spurs. Squilegia chrysantha and A. formosa are two natives of British Columbia, the first with long spurs and yellow flowers, the second with short spurs and red and yellow flowers. These are delightful plants for either rocky areas or edges of shaded borders as well as going well with ferns.

You may need to look in an alpine garden specialist's catalogue for the seeds, or buy a plant to begin your stock. The foliage of all columbines is spreading and lacy, flower stems come freely from established plants, and blossoms last well in shade or where long hours of sunlight do not reach them. You will have blooms from May right on through the summer in the shaded spot with ferns.

Seedlings appear which can be moved around to suit your ideas. Your little homemade woodland area of neglected soil will become a fairyland of blue flowers, brown soil and green fern fronds.

Before long, you build a wooden seat nearby to enjoy the beauty you have helped create out of a piece of poor ground in shade.

THE FIRST EVER 5-DOOR HONDA CIVIC.

Quebec militants ratify CUPW postal contract

MONTREAL (CP) — Members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) in Montreal and Quebec City voted overwhelmingly Sunday to ratify the proposed new national contract for the union's 23,000 members.

About 40 per cent of the 4,000-member Montreal local attended a ratification meeting and voted 94.7 per cent in favor of the agreement, which was initialled Friday by CUPW president Jean-Claude Parrot and Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet.

In Quebec City, the vote was 97 per cent to accept the one-year contract, which includes an eight-per-cent wage increase, plus cost-of-living protection and a shorter work week.

The inside postal workers had been in a legal strike position since Friday.

"We've never seen anything like this in Montreal," said Montreal CUPW president Marcel Perreault of the strong yes vote. CUPW officials have recommended acceptance.

Perreault said he was especially happy with a clause reducing the work week to 37½ hours from 40, and a new procedure for settling worker grievances.

"We showed the public that the postal workers are ready to compromise," said another union official. "We are not a radical union like the employer has tried to describe to the public."

If the agreement is approved nationally, the hourly wage for workers with two years experience will rise to $8.95 from $8.29.

Ratification votes in Victoria, Vancouver and other centres are being held throughout this week.

Figurehead from Irish vessel

Do you know anything about a ship's figurehead which used to be across from the Princess Mary Restaurant vessel on Harbour Street?

The figurehead is of a fair-haired woman dressed in a riding habit holding a single flower in one hand and it's still at the site you describe in the garden at Seaspan International Ltd.

It was removed for a short period several years ago so that the wooden figure could be covered with a protective coating of fibreglass because it was deteriorating, said a spokesman for Seaspan.

No information exists about who the figurehead represents, if anyone, although the barque was an Irish vessel.

It's in need of a new coat of paint, said the spokesman, but otherwise it's in good condition.

Figureheads were placed on boats for good luck. The custom reached its peak in the 18th century but then gradually died out.

By PAT DUFOUR

At 4:10 p.m. on Sunday Bruce Hedric finally did it.

Amid cheers of jubilation from the crew, Hedric's 50-foot cutter Warrior from Seattle crossed the Swiftsure finishing line in Victoria to win the City of Victoria Trophy for first boat home in the 136.2-mile sailing classic.

His experience had finally paid off.

Race committee officials were today still sorting out finishing times for the Swiftsure boats and could not confirm whether or not Warrior has also won the Swiftsure Trophy for first overall-International Offshore Rule boat.

Frank Piddington, race comittee chairman, said so many smaller boats were crossing the finishing line together in stiff winds on Saturday evening and during the night that officials had difficulty sorting out sail numbers and, in some cases, identifying the boats.

He said committee members will have to check the finishing times and sail numbers with report cards handed in by skippers at the inspection station when they completed the race.

"Until this is done, the committee will not be in a position to clearly declare any Swiftsure winners," Piddington said.

The race was a typical Swiftsure.

There were good westerlies at the start as the flotilla of 267 Swiftsure boats and another 162 smaller boats racing the 75.6-mile Juan de Fuca race to Clallam Bay moved up the strait.

In the strong westerlies that built up later on Saturday Lol Killam's 73-foot ketch Graybeard from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club and Lynn Sommers and Alan Buchan's 12-metre Weatherly dominated the Swiftsure fleet.

But it was Weatherly that rounded the Swiftsure mark at 8:35 p.m., closely followed by Graybeard.

Shortly after midnight however, the winds dropped and boats were fighting a sloppy sea with little wind to help them.

It was then that Warrior and the other small boats began to gain on the giants.

Hedric said they managed to keep moving in the slop while the bigger boats were pitching up and down helplessly.

Sunday afternoon the westerlies piped up again and Warrior was on her way to victory.

Even as she crossed the finish line, however, the winds were freshening even more, making it possible for smaller boats to save the corrected time on their handicap and win the most coveted tropy of all, the Swiftsure Trophy for over-all handicap winner.

As Warrior was finishing, race officials were predicting smaller boats that might save their time on Warrior.

They included G. Anderson's Whistlewing from Seattle, Ron Hart's Defiance from Tacoma and J.E. Arens' Tomohawk from Balboa Yacht Club.

A Royal Victoria Yacht Club favorite, Ross Mathewson's Kotuku, had to retire from the race because of forestay problems and veteran campaigner Henry Kotkins of Seattle withdrew his 74-foot yawl Diamond Head during the dead wind period.

In the smaller Juan de Fuca Race, G. Duncan's Hagar of Seattle rounded the Clallam Bay mark at 5:35 p.m. and was first over the finish line at 11:05 p.m.

She won the San Juan Trophy for first IOR boat in division 5.

Thomas Hukle's Outlaw of Seattle beat Hagar on time allowance and won the trophy for first over-all IOR boat and the Royal Canadian Navy Trophy for first division 6 boat.

The Port Angeles Yacht Club Trophy for the overall winner in Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet competition was won by A. Crowe's Demara from the Tiddly Cove Yacht Club. She also won in division G.

Roy Hingley's Romada of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club was the winning boat in division E while Bob Lefaux's Bad News from the Tiddly Cove Yacht Club was top division F boat.

Nielsen vows to ease paths for the blind

Consumer Affairs Minister James Nielsen had words of encouragement but little else for delegates to the annual conference of Canadian Council of the Blind over the weekend.

But his audience at the University of Victoria sessions seemed pleased with Nielsen's promise to look at a problem with the Blind Persons' Rights Act administered by his ministry.

The act permits blind people to take guide dogs with them into places like restaurants and says the blind are not to be discrimated against because of the dogs when seeking accommodation.

In a letter to Nielsen before the conference the council outlined six incidents where blind people had been refused accommodation because of the dogs.

The letter called for the minister to amend the legislation so this type of discrimination would end.

"I was rather distressed to learn of this," said Nielsen.

"It's being looked at with the human rights branch to see which department is better able to handle it."

On other areas of concern outlined in the letter, Nielsen had less to offer.

In particular, the council asked for all handicapped people to be included in the Human Rights Code of the province.

Nielsen said he would speak to Labor Minister Jack Heinrich, who administers the code, about such an amendment.

After the meeting, Nielsen said he won't necessarily be able to support the inclusion of handicapped because he does not know what the complications are of such a change.

The minister said public awarness and understanding of the problems of the handicapped is very important but he said he was optimistic about the future.

"I sincerely believe we are progressing at a remarkably fast rate," he said.

"I think the future looks very bright indeed."

Nielsen said he is pleased with the efforts made by groups such as the council and the handicapped in general.

But, he added, legislative change alone will not solve the problems.

"The fundamental need is for public understanding of the needs and problems of the handicapped."

Pair survive car's write-off

An 18-year-old youth and his 16-year-old girl friend escaped with only minor injuries when their car was demolished in a single-vehicle accident on Salt Spring Island early Sunday.

Ganges RCMP said Michael Larry Fraser, of Ganges, has been charged with driving without due care and attention as a result of the accident.

Construction soon to ease lack of vacant apartments

The apartment vacancy rate is still close to zero in Greater Victoria, but help is on the way.

A number of apartment projects either underway or in the planning stages will add several hundred rental, condominium and co-op units to the area's housing stock.

The biggest at the moment is Cedar Shores in Saanich, on Gorge Road West just past Tillicum. Some of the 260 units have already been completed and are available for occupancy.

But they're definitely not low rent. In this project on the water, two-bedroom suites are going for $440 to $530 a month and three-bedroom apartments are $570 and $580 a month. Only 10 one-bedroom units are planned (completion expected in October) and "they're pretty well spoken for," said a spokesman for the developer.

In Victoria, since the beginning of the year the city has issued building permits to a $750,000 31-suite apartment project at 406 Simcoe in James Bay and a 29-suite condominium development at 640 Montreal.

Several more projects are still filtering through the planning process and haven't yet been granted building permits.

Included in this category is Sam Bawlf's 57-unit $5 million luxury condominium on the Inner Harbor at Yates and Wharf. Application for a permit was made earlier this month.

At Foster Isherwood's 17-unit condominium project at 104 Dallas Road, which has been in the planning for nearly two years, construction is expected to commence this month.

The $1.5 million development will have a restaurant on the main floor.

At the lower end of the scale, the Victoria Innovative Housing Society is buying a three-acre piece of property near Cedar Hill and Hillside for a 30-unit co-op. Construction is expected to start later this year.

The Advisory Planning Commission and city council have also given preliminary approval to:

The addition of three apartment suites to the 116 rent-subsidized units for senior citizens in the 1700-block Cook (above Cubbon's building supplies).

Both require rezoning and will go to public hearings before council votes on the matter.

Subtracting from Victoria's apartment stock was another rezoning proposal. The 31 suites in the Valmar Apartments at 475 Quebec are to be changed to a motel, operated as an annex to the Royal Scot.

Islands fighting threat of link

A member of the Islands Trust warned Sunday that a fixed link with the Mainland will threaten the unique qualities of the Gulf Islands.

The warning came from Dr. Bud Kreisl of Salt Spring Island at a meeting of opponents of the fixed link proposal.

Kreis told about 100 persons at the Empress Hotel the desire to save the Gulf Islands isn't motivated by selfishness but by the wish to preserve them for the future.

Claudia Donato, who has launched a campaign against the scheme, hammered away at the fixed-link proposal, using facts and figures she's gathered in recent weeks to support her arguments.

The estimated cost of $2.5 billion, which she constantly refers to as $2,500 million, was her particular target.

She said the cost of doubling the B.C. Ferry system, including new ships, terminals and docking facilities, would be $614 million.

To recover the cost difference between doubling the ferry system and building any fixed link would take 269 years,

Donato said there will be a concerted push for signatures on an anti-fixed link petition this weekend at Hillside, James Bay Square, Mayfair and Sidney's Beacon shopping centres.

Gov't blamed for careless drivers

Harris Bredavs, of Young Drivers of Canada, doesn't think much of B.C. drivers but he lays much of the blame on the government for its approach to the problem.

In spite of recurring complaints from various provincial bodies about driving records and the cost of accident insurance claims, Bredavs says no one in the government cares enough to do anything.

Bredavs, director of the driving instruction company, and Sam McCleave, the branch's chief instructor, blame much of the problem on the point system for punishing traffic offences.

Bredavs, who used to work for the Motor Vehicle Branch, said in some cases it even becomes a status symbol among young men to see how many points can be accumulated without having licences suspended.

He said he knows of people still on the road who have accumulated 30 to 40 points.

The province should institute a fine and point system, he said.

Enforcement should be tougher, too, says McCleave.

He said people begin by breaking the law in small ways — going five to ten miles an hour more than the speed limit. When they get away without punishment for that they gradually begin to disregard more and more traffic laws, he claims.

"Sooke Road is horrendous. The person who travels at the speed limit is actually in jeopardy."

If a fine system was instituted and police were instructed to crack down more on minor traffic offenders the whole accident record of the province would improve. And it wouldn't cost more because fines would pay for the additional manpower required for enforcement.

The two men are also critical of the government's recent decision to eliminate a $50 refund that has been offered to encourage drivers to take a defensive driving course.

At the end of the year that refund will be wiped out, leaving B.C., Saskatchewan and Manitoba the only provinces in Canada that don't offer drivers some incentive to take defensive driving courses.

The government claims its surveys show that drivers who take the course have as many accidents as those who don't, said Brevas.

But he doesn't like the way the government compiled its statistics saying that fault wasn't taken into consideration. For example, a driver whose car was in an accident while it was parked and the driver away from it would be counted as having had an accident in the same way an impaired driver who killed someone would be counted.

Bredavs admits the change will have an effect on his business but says that isn't the only reason he's complaining.

"Even if defensive driving courses were to be offered by the Motor Vehicle Branch it wouldn't make any difference — drivers should be given some incentive to take them."

Auto investment forges ahead despite woes

Times News Services

DETROIT — Despite the woes of the domestic auto industry, General Motors Corp. is accelerating its investment projects by $2 billion through 1984 because "the biggest mistake anybody could make would be to hang back."

And the president of American Motors Canada William Pickett says North American automakers will spend $80 billion between now and 1985 to come up with more fuel-efficient cars and retool their assembly lines to build them.

In giving that explanation to reporters after the annual shareholders meeting, GM chairman Thomas Murphy noted that investments in small cars begun in the 1975 recession enabled GM to increase its share of the total U.S. car market from 46 per cent to 47.5 per cent during the course of 1979's market shifts.

"Forward-product programs," Murphy told shareholders of the world's biggest automaker, "will move forward at maximum speed, regardless of how much sacrifice must be made in other areas."

Ford Motor Co. recently cut $2.5 billion from its program and cash-strapped Chrysler Corp. has trimmed more than $2 billion. GM has cut its dividend.

Referring to Ford and Chrysler, Murphy said, "We must assume that these cutbacks will be reflected in their future productive capacity and-or in the range of vehicles they will be able to offer customers."

GM had planned to spend $38 billion worldwide through 1985; it now plans $40 billion through 1984. President Elliott Estes told reporters the difference reflects "moving programs forward," mostly in North America.

In his speech to shareholders, Murphy cited investment in Japan by Japanese competitors as one reason for his call for the U.S government to obtain Japanese agreement to limit voluntarily car exports to the United States. He also said GM is "supremely confident of its ability" to defeat the imports "in the marketplace."

Meanwhile, American Motors' Pickett said in Montreal North American cars will have to become smaller and lighter to meet the standards. The typical 1985 car will be three feet shorter than current models, weigh just 2,000 pounds and burn only half the fuel guzzled by 1974 models.

Some 1985 models will weigh only about 700 kilograms. Most new cars will have four-cylinder engines, and many will have manual transmissions, "meaning that we'll have to teach customers to use a clutch again."

For now, small car sales are zooming, accounting for 55 per cent of Canadian purchases so far in 1980, Pickett said. And he predicted new car sales in Canada would rise from the projected one million for the 1980 model year to 1.25 million in 1981.

He also forecast a growth in the number of multi-car families in Canada from the current 18 per cent to something approaching the U.S. figure of 40 per cent.

That forecast, however, is not reflected in latest sales figures. New waves of cash rebates brought only slight improvement in mid-May car sales compared with disastrous figures earlier in the month.

Reports late last week from the five domestic automakers showed sales in the May 11-20 period sagged 29.1 percent below last year — the worst showing for the period in 19 years.

That was better, however, than May 1-10, when a shocked industry recorded its worst early-May sales in 22 years.

For five consecutive sales periods now, auto industry sales have fallen to levels between 24 and 36 percent behind a year ago.

General Motors Corp. said it sold 94,789 U.S.-built cars in mid-May, down 26.4 percent from last year. Ford Motor Co. was off 32.5 percent on volume of 38,917 cars and Chrysler Corp. sales of 13,868 cars were off 43.2 percent.

American Motors Corp. sales for the period were estimated at 4,500, down 18.8 percent, while Volkswagen of America sales of 4,603 U.S.-built Rabbits were down 0.2 percent.

Ford and Chrysler recently began rebate programs offering cash payments of between $100 and $1,000 for buyers of virtually all their cars.

GM, the nation's No. 1 automaker, said it has no current plans to use rebates to stimulate car sales and believes there may be supply shortfalls later this summer at current selling rates.

Economy set to bloom if politics settled

EDMONTON (CP) — Real economic growth of five per cent annually would be achieved in Western Canada thoughout the 1980s if political infighting could be resolved, says Stanley Roberts, president of the Canada West Foundation.

Roberts says there is enough commitment and consensus on constitutional change to solve Canada's political problems.

The Quebec referendum, which he says federalists were lucky to win, served as a cleansing act not only for Quebec, but for all of Canada.

Roberts told 150 people attending a general meeting of the Alberta Chamber of Resources Thursday that the referendum made Canadians think about their country.

It also forced politicians to make strong commitments to work toward constitutional change, he said.

Roberts said there is a consensus on the constitutional changes required.

"Don't underestimate the amount of consensus that has already been reached," he said.

Recommendations by the foundation, the governments of Alberta, British Columbia, Ontario, the previous Liberal and Conservative federal administrations, the Pepin-Robarts commission and Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan's Beige Paper all have common ground, he said.

The foundation is an independent economic, social and political research institution based in Calgary.

About half its financing comes from the governments of Alberta, B.C., Manitoba, the Northwest Territories, Saskatchewan and the Yukon. The balance is contributed by more than 1,000 individuals.

Alberta coffers gain $44m from oil leases

EDMONTON (CP) — Oil companies poured $44,058,252 into the Alberta treasury last week for Crown leases and licences in the provincial energy department's second rights offering this month.

The week's sales, the 10th in 1980, brought the total provincial government proceeds from this source to $539.8 million, compared to $996.7 million for the whole of 1979.

Major bids were made to acquire land in three previously heavily searched regions of the province in the vicinities of the old Turner Valley oil field, the Pembina oilfield and the Simonette natural gas field.

The highest price paid for a single parcel in the sale was $6,401,120 — about $1,078 a hectare — for a west-central Alberta petroleum and natural gas licence.

The parcel, in the area of the Simonette gas field about 100 kilometres southeast of Grande Prairie, was purchased by Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd.

Seaton-Jordan and Associates Ltd., a land consulting company acting on behalf of an unnamed client, paid $5,125,124 — about $1,040 a hectare — for a petroleum and natural gas licence near the southeast corner of Turner alley about 60 kilometres south of Calgary.

U.S. slump spills over

MONTREAL (CP) — The economic recession in the United States is beginning to take its toll on the Canadian economy, particularly in the housing and automobile industries, the Royal Bank reports.

The bank said its Trendicator — a composite index of 11 leading indices of the economy which signals the direction of future economic activity in Canada — is estimated to have declined at an annual rate of 0.2 per cent for the first quarter of 1980.

company reports

Shell

The Royal Dutch-Shell oil company has reported a $230 million increase in profits for the first quarter of 1980.

Profits jumped from $1.42 billion in the first quarter of 1979 to $1.65 billion this year.

The company said the high profits were due to the effect of first-in, first-out inventory accounting at a time of rising prices, in which the current cost of supplies was not reflected.

Brascan

Brascan Ltd. of Toronto has reported its first-quarter net income leaped to $19.6 million or 72 cents a common share from $2.4 million or six cents a share in the same period last year.

Trevor Eyton, president and chief executive officer, said the results reflected improved prices for precious metals as well as oil and gas, together with $4.3 million of dividend income from Noranda Mines Ltd.

He reported higher earnings from subsidiaries John Labatt Ltd., of London, Ont., Western Mines Ltd. of Vancouver and Brascan Resources Ltd. of Calgary.

The latter two companies will be merged June 4 if shareholders approve a previously-announced plan by which Western Mines would buy all the shares of Brascan Resources.

The merged company will have assets with a pretax appraised value of $600 million and profits of more than $35 million annually.

Eyton said he expects the size and profits of the merged company will increase substantially in the next 12 to 18 months.

Western Mines

Western Mines Ltd. of Vancouver has reported first quarter net earnings after extraordinary items of $2.9 million or 54 cents a share compared with $1.4 million or 26 cents a share for the corresponding 1979 period.

Revenue for the quarter totalled $12.3 million compared with $7.3 million last year.

Crestbrook

Higher prices for pulp offset the sharp decline in lumber prices and boosted Crestbrook Forest Industries Ltd. (Vancouver) first-quarter revenue to $28.9 million, compared with $24.7 million during the corresponding period last year.

Net earnings only increased to $2.3 million during the quarter compared with $2.2 million last year because of increased labor and wood costs, the company says.

It said the pulp market is expected to continue strong during the next quarter but the drop in interest rates is too recent to have an impact on the second quarter depressed lumber market.

All 53 now back in Tehran?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Authoritative sources say there are increasing indications the 53 American hostages are still being held captive in Tehran.

Despite reports to the contrary, three embassy officers are still confined in the foreign ministry building but the rest are believed to be in the U.S. embassy compound, their prison since Nov. 4.

U.S. administration officials have been reluctant to comment on the militant claims that the hostages were dispersed to various cities and villages throughout Iran following the abortive U.S. rescue mission on April 25.

But it was understood that none of these hostages was moved from Tehran, despite what Iranian officials have said.

The New York Times reported Sunday ("although the administration lacks conclusive proof") that officials believe any hostages actually moved from Tehran now have been returned to the embassy.

A state department spokesman would say only "none of the hostages have been seen by any independent observer in recent times." He would not comment on their current location.

U.S. officials have been reluctant to comment on hostage movements and locations while the possibility of a new rescue attempt remains.

Administration assessments suggest the militants might lose control of the hostage stituation by dispersing small groups of their captives around the country.

These assessments classify three divergent segments of "student" militants:

— Exchange students who were educated in the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena, Calif., and are said to have become quite receptive toward their captives.

— A smaller segment, educated in Moscow, and said to be completely inflexible and abusive toward the hostages.

— A third "home-grown" faction of Iranian students, hard-line supporters of Ayatollah Khomeini's Islamic Revolution, who have never been abroad and were said to be wavering between the Pasadena and Moscow groups.

Meanwhile, in other developments:

— Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and two other prominent European socialist leaders today met Iran's President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh to discuss the possibility of mediation of the Iran hostage crisis. Officials had no immediate comment on the discussions.

— Iran's prosecutor-general says the International Court of Justice judgment against Iran on the hostage issue is "meaningless," as only one party in the dispute participated.

— The deposed shah of Iran, quoted for the first time in the Egyptian press since he accepted asylum in Egypt on March 24, has expressed disillusionment with his former allies in the West.

"Nothing matters more to the Western citizen except where he will spend his summer or winter vacations," the former monarch, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, was quoted as saying in Saturday's edition of October magazine.

"As for the governments, all that preoccupies them is how to spend less on armament," said Pahlavi, who used much of his country's oil wealth to buy modern arms from the United States and Western European governments.

Bush bows to Reagan

Times News Services

HOUSTON — George Bush ended his two-year quest for the presidency today, leaving the Republican nomination to Ronald Reagan, the conservative former governor of California.

Bush, who announced his withdrawal from the Republican presidential race at a news conference, said he sent Reagan a telegram congratulating him on a "superb" victory.

He said he decided to bow out because of a combination of tight finances, Reagan's overwhelming lead in delegates to this summer's Republican candidate-nominating convention and, more important, the general "perception that the campaign is over."

Following the Kansas Republican state convention Saturday, one-time New Deal Democrat Reagan had an unofficial delegate total of 1,001 — three more than the 998 needed for nomination at the party convention this summer in Detroit.

The results culminated a 12-year drive for the Republican presidential nomination by Reagan, who began seeking the White House in 1968 while governor of California.

According to a poll released Sunday by Time magazine, Reagan holds a narrow lead over President Carter in public opinion with independent presidential candidate John Anderson trailing.

Kwangju still powder keg

Times News Services

KWANGJU, South Korea — South Korean troops and tanks inched toward the riot-torn provincial capital of Kwangju today in a bid to retake the vital southern city, but militants threatened to blow themselves up if the troops attacked.

A civic leader in the town, South Korea's fourth largest, estimated deaths in the nine-day anti-government disturbance at between 400 and 600. He said 4,000 to 6,000 other people were believed injured, many of whom will die soon due to lack of medical care in the besieged city.

A highly placed official source in Seoul, however, said a total of 127 people have so far been confirmed dead. Other reports said at least 161 people have died in the turmoil in Kwangju.

As fears of a bloody showdown mounted, the South Korean Foreign Ministry Sunday advised about 20 American citizens and other foreign nationals in the provincial capital to evacuate.

Kwangju has been under a siege for nine days as part of an effort to choke off South Korea's worst civilian riots in 20 years. Residents suffered from short supplies of food and medical items and other daily necessities.

In the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, a spokesman hailed the Kwangju disturbance, and a giant rally was held to support the militants.

About 5,000 residents held a rally inside the besieged city denouncing the government for moving troops closer while talking about peaceful settlement and leniency.

Meanwhile, the rebels controlling Kwangju said today they want the United States, as a "firm ally" of South Korea, to help mediate a solution to the crisis.

They also said 261 people were killed in rioting last week, more than double the toll previously reported.

President Choi Kyu-hah visited the area and made a televison appeal for "dialogue, not confrontation."

The rebellion followed demonstrations in Seoul and other cities by university students demanding an end to martial law.

Resignation hurts Begin

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government is weakened by the resignation of Defence Minister Ezer Weizman but may survive, other cabinet members say.

Weizman, a moderate, said he is stepping down because of the government's unyielding position in the Palestinian autonomy talks, and its West Bank settlement policy.

Priest gets 10 years

MONTPELLIER, France (UPI) — A Catholic priest who used whips, straitjackets and padded cells to "educate" young girls at a home for the mentally handicapped has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for the suffocation death of an epileptic child.

The Rev. Rene Fabre was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the death in 1976 of Isabelle Le Menach, who had been put in a straitjacket and hung from a wall in a padded cell. Fabre ordered the punishment because she disrupted a Sunday mass with incoherent noises.

During the trial, Fabre gave other examples of what he termed the "tricks" needed to deal with handicapped children: "When Claudine wet her bed, to teach her cleanliness I had to dunk her head in the toilet while I flushed it."

Great Wall of China going to the pigs

PEKING (AP) — The Great Wall of China, built more than 2,000 years ago to bar northern barbarians, is crumbling under an onslaught by farmers seeking stones to build pig pens.

The Peking Daily reported Sunday that about 55 kilometres of the 190 km of wall running through the Peking area have been wrecked, prompting an emergency meeting last week of central government officials.

It said the farmers use official slogans, "Obtain materials locally" and "Use the past to serve the present," to justify their actions, but the paper took a different view.

"These are actions unworthy of their ancestors and shameful crimes against their children and grand-children," it said.

Much of the paper's front page was devoted to a report of the emergency meeting, a call for rewards for people maintaining the wall and punishments for those who wreck it.

The newspaper called the 4,500-kilometre wall "a crystallization of the wisdom and toil of China's laborers."

Destruction was being carried out even by Communist Party officials and organized groups using bulldozers, tractors and trucks, the Peking Daily said, with the stones used for pig pens and other buildings.

Anti-nuke demonstrators fail to breach police lines

Times News Services

SEABROOK, N.H. — About 40 anti-nuclear demonstrators stormed a fence near the main gate of the Seabrook nuclear power plant today but were quickly repulsed by police.

Eight of the demonstrators were arrested at a trailer park 274 metres north of the plant construction site for trying to break through a chain-link fence about a quarter-mile from the main gate on the north access road, officials said. The rest were chased by state police and National Guardsmen and fled into woods.

The incident occurred on the third day of an attempt by more than 1,000 protesters to occupy the site and halt construction of the $3.1 billion plant, one of the nation's most controversial nuclear facilities.

In an apparently related incident, about 14 m of fence was cut at an auto parts manufacturer located between the plant's two main gates sometime Sunday night or early today.

So far at least 33 demonstrators have been arrested since the Memorial Day weekend protest began. Eight injuries were reported Saturday and Sunday in clashes between the anti-nuclear activists and hundreds of state and local police.

Instead of returning to an established campground at the end of Sunday's action, about 50 demonstrators spent the night across the street from a gate to the power plant. A squad of police watched over them.

A spokesman for the Coalition For Direct Action, which planned the demonstration, called the protest "very successful." But troopers inside the plant said the small turnout shows the militant anti-nuclear movement lacks broad support.

The $3.1-billion plant — the first of its two reactors scheduled for completion in 1983 — has been a focal point of anti-nuclear demonstrators since construction began in 1976. In October, a three-day assault by about 1,500 protesters failed after numerous minor injuries and 20 arrests.

Great pretender gives jets orders

By RICHARD WITKIN
New York Times

NEW YORK — The authorities in Tampa, Fla., are looking for a man who radioed false air-traffic instructions to at least six jet airliners landing at or preparing to take off from Tampa International airport late last week.

An official of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) in Tampa, John F. McGinn, said that, in one case that occurred Friday, the pilot of a Trans World Airlines Boeing 707 was told by the counterfeit controller to abort his landing at the last moment and "go around."

The plane was just about six metres off the ground, McGinn said, when the pilot obediently pushed forward the throttles before the regular controller in the airport tower could countermand the order. The plane, on a flight from Kansas City, pulled up, circled the field, and made a normal landing on the second approach.

Jack Barker, a spokesman at FAA regional headquarters in Atlanta, was quoted by The Associated Press as saying that none of the aircraft affected by the phantom orders had been in jeopardy. "The air-traffic controllers are aware and ready to countermand any directions that might be given or are wrong," he said.

McGinn, who is assistant chief of the Tampa tower, suggested that breaking off a landing attempt at the last moment could be a hazardous manoeuvre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case on Saturday, the third day in a row that fake instructions went out over the regular tower frequencies. Also investigating are the Federal Communications Commission and Tampa and airport police.

The FAA supervisor of the airport tower, Gary Fossen, was quoted as saying that the broadcasts appeared to have been made "by a gentleman familiar with the language of flight controllers."

McGinn said that radio equipment that would be needed by the phantom controller, while expensive, could readily be bought from conventional outlets. He said that the frequencies used by the Tampa tower were published in easy-to-obtain flight manuals.

The first two incidents occurred Thursday and there were two or three on Friday and two more Saturday. Fossen was on duty Thursday when the pilot of an Eastern Airlines 727, lined up behind several other planes, was told he was cleared for takeoff.

But what worried officials was the danger if the Eastern plane had been first in line and had been cleared on to the runway while another aircraft was about to land.

On Saturday, according to Barker, a Delta Air Lines jet that had just turned off on a taxiway after landing was told by the ersatz controller, "Nice turn." McGinn said the man must have a good vantage point.

Impatient refugees rush the fence

EGLIN AIR BASE, Fla. (AP) — A handful of Cuban refugees who broke out of the U.S. government's tent city processing centre were still at large today after two nights of escapes and attempted escapes that left at least six people injured, authorities said.

Eglin officials said between 50 and 100 refugees fled the base during a rock-throwing melee Saturday but most were recaptured quickly. Another 11 refugees were unsuccessful in an attempt to get past beefed-up security patrols Sunday.

"There's a handful out there," said Maj. John Toner. "We really don't know exactly how many."

Five servicemen and one Cuban received minor injuries Saturday night after a grievance session erupted into a 30-minute melee, Toner said. Outnumbered military guards were pelted with stones, cinder blocks, broken mirrors and pieces of glass.

About 2,000 refugees stormed the camp's south-eastern fence after the grievance session failed to satisfy the Cubans, who have become increasingly restless as the processing drags on.

Dozens of refugees fled through an adjacent baseball field. Most were rounded up by air force security police, the Florida highway patrol and Okaloosa County sheriff's officers.

"The problem is in rising expectations . . . They just want to get out."

Although security patrols at Eglin were increased after Saturday's incident, another 11 refugees tried to escape from the centre by scaling fences Sunday.

"All were either prevented from escaping or were returned to the camp after getting over (the fences)," said Maj. John Fergus, who added there were no violent incidents.

Officials say 8,392 refugees are currently being held at the processing centre while awaiting resettlement in other U.S. communities. They were brought here after arriving in Key West aboard the so-called Freedom Flotilla of small boats.

Capt. Roland Raab said 1,150 refugees have been resettled at a rate of 100 to 200 a day. He attributed the slow pace to delays in receiving medical and security clearances, obtaining sponsors and arranging transportation.

Nearly 78,000 Cubans have arrived in the United States since the boatlift began five weeks ago. There are nearly 20,000 refugees in Arkansas and another 10,000 in Pennsylvania and a new facility is being readied in Wisconsin.

The stream of boats leaving Cuba continued at a steady pace Sunday as a small group of boat captains gathered in Key West to protest the seizure of their vessels by customs officials.

About 550 boats have been suized since President Carter's May 15 call for an end to the flotilla. Besides losing the use of their boats, the captains face possible heavy fines. Authorities have also arrested two captains who tried to go to Mariel after Carter's order.

Meanwhile, in Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., Roman Catholic John Cardinal Krol criticized Carter for not granting refugee status to all Cuban arrivals and said the church is ready to help Cubans find jobs and homes.

Bittersweet Aussie greeting for Queen

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Jeering demonstrators, chanting "welfare not fanfare" greeted the Queen today when she drove up to open Australia's new High Court building.

The crowd of more than 100, waving red flags and placards, was held back by police as the Queen's car swung into the driveway leading to the controversial new building.

Prince Philip, sitting next to the Queen, waved at the demonstrators whose main complaint was that too much money had been spent on the new court building and the opening ceremonies, and not enough on legal aid.

A happier crowd of more than 1,000 cheered and waved Australian flags as the royal motorcade came to a halt in front of the building.

Final Indira charges dropped

NEW DELHI (AP) — Court officials Saturday abandoned the last of two charges against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. The charges resulted from Mrs. Gandhi's 1975-77 emergency rule.

One case was dismissed by a magistrate who said, "it would be a sheer waste of time and public money" to pursue the charge of abuse of power.

The prosecution announced there was insufficient evidence in the case, resulting from the arrests of eight public figures shortly after they wrote Mrs. Gandhi a letter in 1975 protesting against curbs on civil and political rights and press censorship.

In the second case, government prosecutors moved to dismiss a criminal conspiracy case against Mrs. Gandhi, her son Sanjay, and 13 others. That case was based on the mass arrests of opposition politicians at the start of the emergency rule.

In addition, Sanjay and five other defendants were acquitted Saturday in Dehra Dun, northern India, of conspiring to sell the government sub-standard road rollers. A judge ruled that the rollers were not sub-standard.

Three for Johnny; drivers blast rules

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, the winner, and A. J. Foyt weren't the only drivers upset Sunday with the new power-cutting restrictions on their cars imposed at the famed Indy 500 oval.

"Damned restrictions!" Foyt, a four-time winner of the annual Memorial Day weekend event, was fuming as he stomped off the track.

Few of the 32 other drivers in Sunday's Indy 500 — including Rutherford — were happy with the U.S. Auto Club decree that sharply reduced the power of the monster machines that roar around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway 200 times.

The speeds, which had a few years ago almost routinely surpassed 200 miles an hour, were shaved back to the low 190s at their peak for Sunday's race.

When it was over, Rutherford was a three-time winner with the slowest average speed (142.862 m.p.h.) since Rodger Ward nosed past 140 in 1962.

"It's something we had to live with," said Rutherford. It was an appropriate choice of words since USAC's goal, when it cut the power, was to help keep all the drivers alive through the grueling afternoon on the 2½-mile asphalt track. However, no driver had been killed here since 1973 or even seriously injured since 1975.

They all lived with it — no thanks to USAC, some of the drivers seemed to say.

"A lot of those yellow lights were due to the slower speeds," Rutherford said of the 13 cautions, which were due in part to crashes that knocked out half a dozen of the cars.

"I think some of the crashes were caused by them (the rules). Guys were taking chances out there because we couldn't pass when we wanted to."

Rutherford's team stands to earn at least $270,000, thanks to his time of three hours, 29 minutes, 59.56 seconds — about 30 seconds ahead of three-time runner-up Tom Sneva.

Gordon Johncock, the 1973 Indy winner who finished fourth this time behind Rutherford, Sneva and Gary Bettenhausen, was equally displeased over the power cutback that had drivers going flat out in the turns as well as through the straightaways.

"We'd come into the corners side by side without enough power to pass anybody," Johncock said.

Al Unser, another three-time winner (along with old-timers Wilbur Shaw and Mauri Rose) was more than displeased with the reduction in power. He was angry.

"Forty-eight inches," he said of the new boost limit on manifold pressure. "They can keep it!"

And Foyt, the only four-time winner whose dream of a fifth vanished after 173 laps due to engine problems, flared when someone asked how the race had been going until then.

"The damned cars ran like a herd of turtles," he snapped. "I don't think the people out here paid to see us go 130 miles an hour!"

But Sneva didn't mind a bit. In fact, he seemed to be calling Unser, Foyt and friends crybabies.

"That's ridiculous," Sneva said of the complaints that the fans had somehow been cheated. "This is the best show we've had in a long time.

"We ran wheel-to-wheel. It was more entertaining for the fans. The trouble is, the veterans had to work harder. They'd like to shut the other guys out."

One of those veterans — at 52 the oldest driver on the track — Jim McElreath, got tangled up in the 54th lap with Roger Rager, one of 10 rookies in the field.

"They spent all month warning everybody about the rookies," the disgruntled Rager said. "They should have warned about the veterans."

One of the yellow caution lights was damaging to Pancho Carter, who came in sixth, behind defending champion Rick Mears. He was penalized one lap for passing the pace car during one slowdown.

Carter said he'd been waved ahead by an official and was considering an appeal if he could back it up with videotape or film.

He had completed 199 laps when Rutherford got the checkered flag. Without the penalty he'd have been in the 200th, and in second place fewer than 29 seconds behind the winner. The difference in prize money, based on last year's total, will amount to more than $70,000. When he was penalized, he was running first, with Rutherford in the pits under a caution light. It certainly would have been a different race, and maybe Carter could have won it.

Rutherford took the lead for good on the 178th lap with Sneva and Mears in the pits. From then on, it was not so much a race against the clock or the competition as it was against the energy crunch. He'd refueled with 31 laps to go. A full tank, under the best of conditions, will take him 32 laps.

"I called Jim Hall," Rutherford said of his radio-helmet call to his car's designer and builder, waiting in the pits. "I asked him, 'Do you think I can make it to the end?'

"He said, 'I think you can.' I said, 'Are you sure?' He said, 'Yeah.'"

Hall was right.

Rutherford waved bye-bye and was gone

INDIANAPOLIS — A hundred miles before he won the Indianapolis 500 for the third time, Johnny Rutherford snatched his magic Yellow Haze racer from off Tom Sneva's tailpipe Sunday.

At 200 miles per hour on the front straightaway of Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the flying Texan whipped alongside Sneva the way you'd put your family sedan up next to a slowpoke puffing uphill.

Then, faster than you can say "A.J. Foyt is really steamed this time," Rutherford jerked his car back in front of Sneva to get ready for the scary entrance to Turn One, a deadend Sunday for six cars who bounced off the wall there.

And at 200 mph, with Sneva's schoolteacher visage receding in the rearview mirror, Rutherford did this: He waved bye-bye. He took his right hand off the wheel and raised the orange fire-gloved mitt in a farewell.

Bye-bye, for sure. On a gorgeous midwest day of sun and soft breezes with 350,000 spectators high on the thunder and sweet-sour fuel and rubber smells of racing, Johnny Rutherford and the Jim Hall-built ground effects Chaparral were by far the best.

Rutherford won the $300,000-plus first-place share of the $1.3 million purse by 30 seconds over runnerup Sneva, who was so happy with rising from the 33rd and last starting position that he confessed he never thought of winning. "Rutherford was too strong all day," Sneva said.

Rutherford's victory, anticipated since he won at Ontario last month and then qualified fastest here by a full mile per hour, was made easier when several expected challengers fell out early with various mechanical maladies, Al Unser quit after 40 of the scheduled 200 laps, Mario Andretti lasted only 70 laps, Bobby Unser 127 and A.J. Foyt 173.

There were 13 yellow flags for 60 laps. Dick Ferguson broke a toe and Bill Whittington fractured his lower right leg in spin-outs. No one else was injured.

So strong is the Hall Chaparral down the straights . . . so secure is it in the nine-degree banked turns here . . . so efficient in every way is this exotic ground effects machine — the ground effects label means the car produces a vacuum under it, that vacuum gluing the car to the track — so all-fired fast was the shining yellow racer that a rookie driver, Dick Ferguson, called it "the Yellow Haze."

Rutherford, the Texan, 42, as cocky as anyone brave enough to drive these matchboxes while strapped between 20-gallon tanks of explosive fuel, first tried to explain the wave by saying what it wasn't.

"It wasn't a defiant gesture, like, 'Ha, ha, I'm passing you,' or anything like that," Rutherford said sheepishly. "When things are going right and I pass somebody, I acknowledge them."

Waving to folks he has passed, Rutherford finally said, is a way of saying "thanks for not getting in the way — or, 'see you in a lap.'"

"Sheer bravura will get you between white sheets at Indy," Mario Andretti has said, but Rutherford's bravura was born of confidence not daredeviltry. Whatever he asked of the Chaparral, it delivered. His considerable driving skills — in 205 Indy-car races, he ranks sixth all-time — made the Rutherford-Chaparral combination unbeatable. And the Texan knew it.

He had only one worrisome moment.

It happened around Lap 75. By then Tom Sneva and his brother, Jerry, were running first and second. Rutherford passed Jerry. But as he came up against Tom's tailpipe, he could go no further.

"I didn't pass him because the car wasn't handling," he said. "The turbulence off Tom's car turned me loose. We had to stop to make a change. We raised one of the front wings."

With that adjustment in aerodynamics, the Rutherford Chaparral took to flying again. It was no contest.

Parsons wins squeaker

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Benny Parsons overcame the elements, a rash of caution flags and Darrell Waltrip with just one lap remaining in driving his Chevrolet to victory Sunday in the World 600 Grand National stock car race.

Parsons, from Ellerbe, N.C., took the lead on the backstretch and held off Waltrip to win by two car lengths and take home the winner's share of $44,850.

Parsons averaged 191.933 kilometres an hour in winning the $377,225 event over the 2.41-kilometre oval. Waltrip earned $38,700.

A record 14 yellow caution flags went out during the race. Three were caused by rain, with the last two resulting in red flags which held up the event for one hour and 35 minutes.

Pole-sitter Cale Yarborough, David Pearson, Bobby Allison and Dale Earnhardt, were involved in a pileup on the 260th lap. The accident took Allison out of the race and destroyed the chances Yarborough and Earnhardt had to win the event.

Only Parsons and Waltrip wound up going the full 400 laps. Third place went to Terry Labonte. Richard Petty was fourth and Pearson fifth.

Through the latter stages of the race, Parsons rode Waltrip's tail until finally passing him with 25 laps remaining. Waltrip retook the lead with 12 laps remaining and relinquished it with eight to go. He then recaptured the lead on the 394th lap and held it until Parsons passed him.

This was Pearson's second race in two days. He had just won the 300-mile Nascar race Saturday at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Pearson's $13,130 victory was marred by a five-car wreck on the 34th lap, when John Prior of Centralia, Ill., slammmed into the side of a Chevrolet driven by Junior Crouch of Taylorsville. Crouch's left arm was mangled badly and he was knocked unconscious in the accident. He was taken to Charlotte Hospital where his arm was amputated.

Crouch also suffered massive head injuries and chest injuries and remains in guarded condition at Cabarrus Memorial Hospital.

Wests make it two straight

John McGuire (6) clears ball as he helps Vic West to Provincial Cup triumph

Victoria West can now take a well-deserved rest.

Wests retained the Provincial Cup by defeating Vancouver Umberto-Columbus 2-1 before about 800 soccer fans Saturday at Royal Athletic Park, making it the first time a Vancouver Island League club has won the British Columbia crown twice in succession.

Wests will now take some time off before resuming training two weeks before the Western Canadian championships in Saskatoon, Aug. 22-24.

The defending Canadian champions, are hoping to also repeat there and earn a berth in the national tournament, Sept. 13-15 in Halifax.

It also marked the third close contest between the two teams in the past five years. Vic West won 1-0 in 1976 and Columbus posted a 2-1 decision in 1977.

McLaren battled a defender for the ball deep in the right corner, took possession and crossed a pass to Steve Moss, who then relayed to Steve Forslund.

Forslund's shot hit a defender in front of the net and Williams was in the right position to drive the rebound past veteran goalkeeper Peter Greco, who had no chance on the play.

"That repays me for the time Greco stopped a penalty kick I had three years ago," Williams said later.

After the first goal, Wests appeared to relax and resorted to defensive tactics which at several points drew jeers from the crowd.

Midfielder Dave Price scored the equallizer for Vancouver 18 minutes into the second half, driving a 25-yard shot into the top of the net past startled Jim DeGoede.

Another shot by veteran Vanni Lenaduzzi appeared to put the Columbus squad on top with less than 10 minutes remaining but referee Hans Clodius of the Fraser Valley Association signalled an offside and disallowed the goal.

English, a Manchester United product in his second season with Vic West, had something to chuckle about following the match.

"I've never been further east in Canada than Vancouver. The guys promised me a trip to Saskatoon and they did it."

The 'Bull' is on a rampage

The Associated Press

Greg Luzinski is behaving like the proverbial bull in a china shop these days.

"I'm seeing the ball good and hitting it hard," said the Bull. "It's that simple.

"Everything I hit is finding a hole. I've always said that home-run hitters always get in grooves — and I guess I'm in one."

With Sunday's performance, Luzinski hit in his sixth straight game, a streak in which he has connected for 12 hits in 22 trips.

Among the hits were five home runs and three doubles. He also was credited with eight runs batted in.

Luzinski's fifth-inning home run followed a shot by third baseman Mike Schmidt was the sixth time this season that the two sluggers have both homered in the same game. Both now have 12 home runs, tops in the majors.

In the American Leaue, Mark Brouhard is turning out to be a good buy for Milwaukee Brewers.

Until Sunday, when he belted his first major league homer, a three-run shot that gave the Brewers a 3-2 American League victory over Minnesota Twins, Brouhard's claim to fame was that he hit a ball measured 617 feet in the air and 682 in total distance while playing for Salinas of the California League in 1978.

Toronto rookie Lloyd Moseby duplicated Brouhard's feat by hitting his first major league homer — he also singled, doubled and drove in four runs.

Moseby, 20, reported to Toronto on Saturday. He made his presence felt with a two-run double off Tommy John in the first inning and then snapped a 2-2 tie in the third with a two-run homer as John again failed to gain his 200th major league victory.

MOMENT TO REMEMBER, New York's Bob Nystrom jumps for joy after scoring overtime goal that provided Islanders with 5-4 victory that brought Islanders their first National Hockey League championship. Teammate Lorne Henning moves in to congratulate Nystrom. (AP Wirephoto).

By GRANT KERR

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers gritted their teeth and tried to be classy, but the bitterness of the Stanley Cup final seeped through tears of defeat.

"I won't forget what happened this afternoon," said left winger Bill Barber. "I'm proud of all the guys on our hockey team because we worked and did our best all year.

"Nobody can take what we did away from us. But I won't forget the officiating for a long time."

Barber and the rest of the Flyers were furious about a number of calls — or lack of them — in Saturday's sixth game of the best-of-seven series, won 5-4 in overtime by New York Islanders.

They said Denis Potvin knocked New York's first goal into the Philadelphia net with a high stick; that the second New York goal was offside; and that Bob Nystrom, whose second goal of the game settled it in overtime, deserved a penalty in the second period for crashing into Pete Peeters and stunning the Flyers' netminder.

Television replays showed that Potvin's goal was legal, the second New York goal was blatantly offside, and the collision between Nystrom and Peeters was unavoidable.

Coach Pat Quinn said the final game was typical of Philadelphia's entire year. He thought officials had picked on the Flyers because of their aggressive style.

"But it would be wrong for me to speak at this time because the Islanders . . . nothing should taint their victory," said Quinn. "They deserved the victory because they worked damn hard for it."

Quinn did have one more thing to say — that the offside goal "should be an embarrassment to that particular official."

Linesman Leon Stickle said he was in position to make the call when winger Clark Gillies made a drop pass to Butch Goring just outside the Flyers' blueline. Goring took the puck into the Philadelphia zone and fed Duane Sutter a perfect pass for an easy goal.

"I guess I blew it," said Stickle. "Maybe there was tape on the stick and it confused me.

"Maybe I was too close to the play. Apparently the replay showed I missed it."

Barber was one of the few Flyers who talked with reporters after the game. Most of the Philadelphia players stayed in a private room, keeping their thoughts to themselves.

Captain Mel Bridgman refused to blame the officials for the defeat, although he said the Sutter goal took some of the momentum away from the Flyers.

In the Islanders' dressing room, Bryan Trottier embraced Armand Potvin, father of Denis, and said: "Isn't it great?"

The elder Potvin beamed, then declared: "I don't care if I go to hell now — I've been in heaven."

"Two things crossed my mind when Bob (Nystrom) scored," said Trottier. "I didn't know whether to be happy because the series was over or because we won the Stanley Cup. It's so, so nice."

Trottier earned two assists in the final game for a playoff record total of 29 points, including 12 goals. Selected members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association voted Trottier the Conn Smythe Trophy, as the most valuable player to his team in the playoffs.

He said the scoring record — breaking the mark of 27 points set by Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins in 1970 and tied by Frank Mahovlich of Montreal Canadiens in 1971 — was meaningful only because of the Islanders' first Stanley Cup triumph.

It felt best in the moments after Nystrom scored his second goal of the game, ninth of the playoffs and four career overtime goal at 7:11 of an extra period.

Earlier, Potvin, Sutter — on the play that was flagrantly offside — and Mike Bossy scored for the Islanders, who led 4-2 after two periods.

Reggie Leach and Brian Propp had the Flyers goals to that point, and Bob Dailey and John Paddock scored third-period goals to force overtime.

Nystrom, taking a pass from John Tonelli, as he had done for his first goal, at 19:46 of the second period, relieved the pressure and erased the choker label that has afflicted the Islanders with his overtime goal.

"It was a two-on-two, but then Bobby and I made it a two-on-one because he just zipped past the other defenceman," said Tonelli. "It was one of our criss-crosses."

No one did more work in the playoffs than the Islanders. To a man, they were exhausted.

"My body's gone completely limp," said goaltender Billy Smith, who set a record with 15 playoff victories.

"All of a sudden, you just sit back and say, 'It's over.' I'm totally exhausted."

Goring, who took the offside drop pass from Gillies, said he never stopped to wonder about it.

"Everybody said I was offside, but I didn't look at the blue line. I didn't realize it was offside, if it was. I just played it like it wasn't offisde. I never hesitated.

"I saw Sutter and he was wide open, so I just gave the pass to him. If it was offside, I didn't know about it. If it was offside, that's hockey."

"It was fitting that we did it in overtime," said Arbour. "Every time we lost a game the old choke thing always comes back from you newspaper guys.

"It seems there are only two teams that are choke artists — the Rangers and the Islanders. Everybody else can lose in the playoffs and that's fine . . . but around here they always give us that label.

"And, from the other side (the Flyers), they said our cheeks are getting a little tighter. Maybe their cheeks are a little tighter right now, too."

Budgets connect without homers

Victoria Budgets cranked out 31 hits in claiming three of their four Northwest Men's Fastball League games at the weekend but, in one respect, the performance wasn't one Victoria fans have come to expect from the team that has dominated the game for the past decade.

The 31 hits did not include a home run, and field manager Harvey Stevenson admits it would take "some searching" to go back and find a similar, homer-less weekend.

The irony of it is that catcher-first baseman Bob Burrows, who provided a major share of the team's big blows, came back to the Budgets at the weekend. Recovering from an arm injury, Burrows was in uniform but did not get to play.

Stevenson would prefer Burrows to get additional recuperating time and not risk re-injury.

Even without homer power, the batting was enough to help Budgets split a Saturday night twinbill with the front-running Seattle Peterbilt and then sweep a pair Sunday from Seattle Westside Federals, 2-1 and 3-0.

Peterbilt banged out nine hits and took advantage of a shaky Victoria defence to win the opener 5-2 but Budgets salvaged a split by taking Saturday's nightcap 6-1 behind the two-hit pitching of Mark Smith.

Because of the absence of Rob Guenter, Smith and Dave Wilson had to carry the pitching load at the weekend. Guenter was called to St. Catharines to join the Canadian national team for an exhibition series against the U.S. champions from Midland, Mich.

Randy Benn sat out the game Peterbilt won, then went into action to power Budgets to their three victories. Benn banged out six hits in 10 trips to the plate for a resounding .600 average.

Outfielder Dennis Eckert came through with five hits and came closest to sending one out of the park. A bases-loaded blast in the second inning of Sunday's doubleheader was about to clear the centre-field fence when Westside's Len Pupo caught up to the ball for a very loud out.

Budgets, who have won three of four games against Peterbilt this season, boosted their won-lost record in the eight-team league to 9-3. Peterbilt also was 9-3 heading into action against Vancouver Thirsk on Sunday.

Shamrocks protect home-floor record

Victoria Shamrocks kept their home record unblemished and stayed one step behind league-leading Coquitlam Adanacs in Western Lacrosse Association play Saturday night.

Paced by Kevin Alexander with six goals and three assists, the Rocks defeated New Westminter Salmonbellies 13-12 at Memorial Arena while in Nanaimo the Adanacs came from behind in the third period to down the Timbermen 11-7.

It was the second win of the season for the Rocks over the Salmonbellies, their fourth at home, their fifth of the year and it left them two points behind Coquitlam.

It didn't come easily.

Trailing 12-7 at the 2:13 mark of the third period when Alexander scored his sixth goal, the Bellies replaced goalkeeper Ron Banister with Reg Forster and the move appeared to ignite the visitors.

The Bellies mounted a furious assault and scored five goals without a reply to tie the score.

Victory for the Irish didn't come until the 19:30 mark when rookie Tarey Pollock, recently acquired in a deal with Nanaimo, scored the winner while being checked by Steve Manning.

Manning showed his displeasure by dumping Pollock heavily after the goal for which he received a penalty, more or less killing any chance the Bellies may have had to get even again.

The Irish led 5-4 after the first period, Alexander scoring two goals, and 11-7 after two periods. Jim Lynch had two goals and Andy Reid, Larry Bell, Paul Michael and Bill Marechek had singles for the Rocks. Chris Hall and Art Webster each had four assists.

Banister stopped 24 shots and Forster seven.

Shamrocks' Larry Smeltzer made 51 saves, 21 in the second period and 18 in the final period in another outstanding display.

In Nanaimo, the Timbermen led 6-3 after the first period and 7-5 after two before Coquitlam took over.

Mark Valastin and Mike Reelie each had two goals for Coquitlam. Singles came from Moe Jodoin, Matt Aitken, Rico Bellusci, Ray Mattinson, Gord Quilty and Tim Kelly.

It was Coquitlam's sixth victory.

Shamrocks meet Vancouver Burrards at Kerrisdale Tuesday and are home to the Adanacs Wednesday in a battle for first place.

Capitals capture Heywood honors

Capitals topped the winner's side by handing Mears their only other defeat, 4-3, after a 14-inning duel between pitchers Marv Carver and Jack Petrie. Mears rebounded for a second chance at Capitals by defeating Knowles Realty 3-2 in the losers' bracket final.

Mears' third baseman Dave Rivers was voted the tournament's most valuable player; Capitals' Carver was the top pitcher with a 1.91 earned-run-average in 26 innings, and Terry Hoy of Knowles was the top batter with a .588 average.

Selected to the all-star team were Petrie, second baseman Larry Shaw, left fielder Barry Moen and centre fielder Larry Brown, all of Mears; first baseman Murray Slugget, shortstop Russ Walker and catcher Dale Ewasiuk, all of Knowles; third baseman Vic Gee of Capitals, and right fielder Ross Mason of Labatts.

Touched for second-inning singles by Garth Hastings and Mike Lewis, Fedosenko was in complete command the rest of the time in providing Builders with a 6-0 victory. Bowden tossed a six-hit, 2-1 victory as Seaspray won the second game.

Schneider snaps swim mark

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Petra Schneider set a world record Saturday in the women's 200-metre medley with a time of two minutes 13 seconds at the East German swimming championships.

Schneider bettered the record of 2:13.69 set by Tracy Caulkins of the U.S. last January.

Stewart nips Taylor in stock car feature

Don Stewart and Dale Taylor nearly finished in a tie for first place in the stock car main event Sunday at Western Speedway.

Rain had forced postponement of the auto racing program Saturday night.

Gord Stone, who won the feature the previous Saturday and claimed a victory in the second heat and a third in the trophy dash, was knocked out midway through the race with mechanical difficulties.

Dean Cramb of Duncan, who won the dash, was also bumped out of contention. His vehicle ended up on top of the tires on the backstretch after a minor bumping incident early in the race.

In the jalopy main, Rick Hogg started at the back of the pack, quickly threaded through his rivals to take over the lead on the 15th of 20 laps and took the checkered flag. Hogg also finished third in the trophy dash and second in a heat race.

Sandpipers take lead

Surrey Sandpipers won two out of three games against visiting Victoria Merchants at the weekend to snap a tie for first place in the Pacific Junior "A" Baseball League between the two teams.

Victoria finally got untracked in the last game Sunday, winning 10-3 after suffering a 3-0 loss in the opener and dropping a 9-8 decision Saturday.

TRINIDAD TRIUMPH

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AFP) — Trinidad has won the Caribbean women's team golf title in a six-country competition.

Paul Hrach pitched both games Sunday. He struck out nine and yielded one base on balls and four hits in the opening loss and fanned one and walked none while allowing only two hits in the victory.

Gary White had two hits and batted in two runs to spark Merchant hitting in the second encounter.

Schmidt was also the big gun Saturday, keying a five-run Victoria rally in the sixth with a three-run double.

Vilas loves that clay

By The Associated Press

Guillermo Vilas has shown once again that in tennis tournaments played on clay, he's a tough man to beat.

Vilas added the Italian Open to his list of clay-court titles Sunday, beating 20-year-old Yannick Noah of France, 6-0, 6-4, 6-4. The Rome championship was the only major clay-court title that had eluded Vilas, who lost in the finals in 1976 and again last year, when Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States captured the championship.

Vilas, who won the French and U.S. Opens in 1977, both on clay, earned $28,000. He now heads for Paris and the French Open, the most prestige of the world's clay-court tournaments now now that the U.S. Open has been switched to cement.

In another men's event Sunday, Rolf Gehrig of West Germany beat Christopher Freyss of France, 6-2, 0-6, 6-2, 6-2, and won the $12,600 first prize at the Bavarian International.

In women's tennis, the United States won the Federation Cup over Australia for the fifth consecutive time, capturing all three matches played in Berlin.

Chris Evert Lloyd rallied to beat Dianne Fromholtz, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1, in the opening match, Tracy Austin clinched the team title by defeating Wendy Turnbull, 6-3, 6-2, and Rosie Casals and Kathy Jordan won the doubles over Fromholtz and Susan Leo, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

A 'Beauty' takes Sandown feature

The crowd favorite broke stride but Amortizer's Beauty managed some fancy stepping of her own Saturday to capture the featured ninth race at Sandown Park.

The six-year-old brown mare, owned by I. Tetreault of Surrey, trained by F. Tetreault and driven by Keith Quinlan, paced the mile in a nifty two minutes, two and three-fifths seconds to post her best time of the year in a wire-to-wire victory.

The time also matched her best time ever.

Quinlan's triumph in the five-horse feature race was his third of the afternoon. Quinlan scored with favored Cashier's Window in the second and came right back with Duane Relda in the third.

Amortizer's Beauty paid $10.80 to win and joined J.D. Sincous in setting up an exactor payoff of $119.20. The healthy payoff was set up when 5-to-2 favorite Satin Satan, which had beaten almost the same field on May 19, broke stride early.

Another one of the standardbred racing "ladies," Shirley Mohawk scored an impressive victory in the eighth. Driven by Bob Boyd, Shirley Mohawk covered the mile in 2:03.4 to post her lifetime best.

The bay gelding owned by the Godfrey Stables of Surrey led Keystone Warlord and H.T. Brook to a 1-2-3 finish in the 10th race and set up a Triactor payoff of $282.60.

It was the second time Habitant Anik figured on the front end of the Triactor since the harness meet opened the previous Saturday.

On opening day, however, the Triactor payoff was a whopping $2,719.

Duncan pair captures lead

SEATTLE (AP) — Vivian Petrik and Mona Faganello, both of Duncan, combined to take the Division II doubles lead Sunday in the Women's International Bowling Congress tournament.

Totaling 1,043, the Canadians bettered the Creston, Wash., team of Judy Hughes and Charlene Lanway, who had held onto the lead since April 22, with 1,031.

Petrik paced the new leaders with 543 as she connected on eight strikes in a closing 232 game. Faganello contributed a 500 series.

Young survives struggle in stretch

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young faltered on the last seven holes Sunday, but hung on to win the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $100,000 Corning tournament with a two-over-par 74 final round that left her two strokes ahead of rookie Myra VanHoose.

Young finished the 72-hole tournament with a seven-under-par 281, including an opening-round 66 that established a course record. The victory was the third of the season for the veteran.

Young led from the start of the four-day tournament and held a four-stroke lead going into the final round. But she bogeyed the 11th and 14 holes and made a double bogey on No. 13 to stay only two strokes ahead of Lori Garbacz with three holes left to play.

But Garbacz could not take advantage of the opportunity and bogeyed No. 16 and double bogeyed No. 17, finishing five strokes behind the winner.

Young also finished by bogeying the final hole, but her championship was not challenged by then.

Sand blasts, putter do job for Graham

And Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., enjoyed one of his biggest paydays on the Professional Golfers' Association tour when he finished in a two-way tie for sixth place with Hale Irwin and collected $10,425.

"I knew I would have to putt well if I were going to beat him," said Graham after his one-stroke victory Sunday over the American tour's best current player in a stirring head-to-head duel. The slender Australian backed his words with deeds.

He one-putted seven of Muirfield Village's swift undulating greens. He saved five pars from traps, blasting to within two feet or closer to the hole each time.

And Graham foiled Watson's bid for a sixth PGA tour victory this season with two long, downhill putts, one of 20 feet for eagle-three on the 15th hole and another from 30 feet for the clinching birdie on the 18th.

Halldorson, meanwhile, finished with a 72 to finish at 284, just four strokes behind the leader. He was tied with Canadian teammate Jim Nelford after Saturday's third round, but the Burnaby native soared to a 78 Sunday and finished at 290. Nelford's cheque was worth $1,964.

"I knew if I made the putt at 15 I was right back in the tournament," Graham said. "I had been leaving putts short all day.

"What helped me is that it was downhill. It was impossible to leave short. I had practiced the same putt at 18 three or four times on Wednesday. It looks like it would break left. It doesn't. It breaks right. And you have to putt it like a six-footer."

A closing 70 gave Graham his third consecutive sub-par round over the 7,116-yard layout created by Jack Nicklaus. He finished at 280 for a $54,000 payday.

"It was not a difficult putt," said Watson of his 71 which left the defending champion with a 281 and a $32,400 cheque which made him the tour's third $2 million career money winner.

Eight players either led or shared the final-round lead with no one ever more than one shot in front.

Welsh veteran on point spree

BURNABY — Canada faced a one-man scoring machine Saturday and lost an international rugby encouter to the Wales B squad 24-7.

Wales ended its five-game tour undefeated.

Captain Steve Fenwick, the sturdy centre who has been capped 27 times for Wales, scored 21 points, as Canada failed to capitalize on the Welsh team's weaknesses despite having a good share of the play.

Fenwick gaves Wales an early lead with a penalty goal. Canada then stormed back when flanker Jim Donaldson scored after winger Robbie Greg initiated the attack with a slashing run.

Fenwick then went to work, kicking three penalties in a row, the last from 50 yards.

One of the really great falsecards of all time occurred in a home game in New York many years ago. Star of the hand was a man named Sidney Satenstein, an enthusiastic rubber bridge player nationally unknown.

Victim of the falsecard was John Rau (South), well-known expert. Rau ducked the spade lead, losing to the king, and was forced to play the A-Q together on the spade return.

Rau had seven sure tricks — four hearts and three aces — and the outcome appeared to rest squarely on finding Satenstein (East) with the king of diamonds. If he had it, Rau could assure nine tricks by taking two diamond finesses.

But Rau was not content to settle for just a 50 percent chance that the finesse would succeed. He saw that he could increase his chances somewhat by playing a club first. Accordingly, at trick three, Rau led a low club from dummy, whereupon Satenstein played the king!

Rau took the ace and — after congratulating himself upon his sagacity in leading a club first — continued with the nine and finessed. It never occurred to him that Satenstein might have started with the K-J alone. He naturally thought that West had the J-8-2 and East the singleton king.

Satenstein swooped on the trick like a bird of prey and returned a spade. West cashed three spade tricks and Rau went down one. It was the kind of hand where the victim rejoices together with the victor, and to this day Rau takes pleasure in recounting the giant hoax perpetrated against him.

Had Satenstein made the normal play of the jack on the first club lead, Rau would have had no choice but to take two diamond finesses and he would have made four notrump.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"They must be very religious in this part of Germany," said Mary. "We've passed four roadside shrines since we left the hotel. Did you notice how far apart they were?"

Stan nodded. "As a matter of fact I did," he replied. "The third was 12 kilometres from the first. The fourth was 8 kilometres from the second, and the third was 2 kilometres nearer to the fourth than to the second."

That's being observant! How far was the fourth shrine from the first?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: Clem's number was 268.

Bottler skein snapped

All good things, it seems, must come to an end.

Victoria Bottlers suffered their first defeat in 38 games, going back to last season, dropping a 17-12 decision Sunday to Vancouver in a B.C. Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

On Saturday, the Bottlers tripped Adanacs 16-7 in a shortened game in Coquitlam.

Randy Bradley set the scoring pace for Vancouver players, who outran the Bottlers in Sunday's contest, with seven goals and three assists.

Alton Davis and Doug Barnes scored three goals each for Victoria, Shawn Dheensaw added two goals and three assists and singles were contributed by Glen Jay, Bob Brown, Paul Cullen and Frank Wendt, who also earned four assists.

Goaltender Glen Whoatley played a major role for Vancouver by making 51 saves. Eric McQuarrie and Russ Gurney combined to block 38 shots for Victoria.

The game in Coqquitlam was called by the referee with almost nine minutes remaining in what had been a chippy contest.

A total of 146 minutes in penalties had been handed out — 83 to Adanacs and 63 to Bottlers — before the game was halted.

Steve LaPointe and Barnes led the Victorians with three goals each while Davis added two goals and three assists and Bob Brown collected two goals and two assists. Single tallies were supplied by Dheensaw, who also had four assists, Gordie Christiaens, Rob Banister, Wayne Christiaens, Bob Wells and Jay.

New Legion problem

A pair of injuries and another player's departure have trimmed Legion's roster to 17. Esquimalt, however, will recruit four players from Victoria Bottlers, an intermediate A affiliate, for Tuesday's game in the Sports Centre against New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Clint Montgomery, Alton Davis, Bob Brown and Gord Christiaens have been called up by Legion. They'll help fill the void created by injuries to Russ Kennedy (broken finger) and Gord Redlin (chest injury) and the departure of Al Zozula, who has left Victoria to work in the B.C. Interior.

Both Redlin and Kennedy were injured Saturday when Richmond Roadrunners shaded Legion 13-12 in Richmond as Equimalt suffered its fifth loss in six starts.

New Westminster, which had beaten Legion 13-12 in a controversial game Friday, also will be shorthanded. Commissioner Bruno Admann of Richmond suspended Salmonbellies' coach Dave Wilfong for one game and player John Rousse for three as a result of their ejection from Friday's game. Rousse was thrown out for kneeing an Esquimalt player.

"They weren't suspended for the reason that upset us," said Legion manager Bob Reid. The Esquimalt executive was upset by what he termed "racial slurs" directed at his players from the New Westminster bench.

Jody Twa scored a shorthanded goal with less than five minutes left in the game to break a 12-12 deadlock and spark Richmond's victory over Legion. Bob Johnson, Mike Holob, Todd Lorenz, Doug Morrison and Art Hazell each scored twice for the Runners.

Dolphins still winless

Victoria Dolphins are still looking for their first victory after weekend action on the mainland in the Inter-City Senior Women's Lacrosse League.

Richmond, the reigning Canadian champion, beat the Dolphins 8-3 Sunday after North Vancouver had clipped the Victorians 5-4 Saturday.

The Victoria club has now suffered four losses in league play, including three by only one goal.

Saunders and Cherilyn Sloat each collected a goal and an assist against North Vancouver.

Arbutus takes Victoria crown

Arbutus replaced Oak Bay as the track and field power in Greater Victoria junior high school ranks while Spencer and Dunsmuir came away with top honors in the Sooke-Saanich meet.

Arbutus, sparked by the double-record performance of Ken Wilmhurst, amassed 221 points at Centennial Stadium to edge defending-champion Oak Bay by 16 points for the team championship.

The combined St. Michael's-Norfolk House team finished third with 176 points, followed by Cedar Hill (171), Lansdowne (134), Central (110), Harbor View (108), Colquitz (53), Reynolds (52), Shoreline (23), Glenlyon (22), Lambrick Park (18), S.J. Willis (10) and St. Andrew's (5).

Wilmhurst cracked the midget boys' 1,500 metres record with a time of four minutes, 19.3 seconds and bettered the 800 record with a time of 2:06.

Pat Wellman of Cedar Hill also set two records, winning the junior girls' 800 in 2:17.2 and the high jump with a leap of 1.72 metres.

Don Ball of Arbutus cracked the junior boys' pole vault record (3.41 metres) and Ian McMurtrie of Harbor View set a new shotput standard with a heave of 14.14 metres.

In the Sooke-Saanich meet, Spencer topped the midget division with 118 points while Dunsmuir won the junior team trophy with 196 points. Dunsmuir was runner-up in the midget division with 110 points while Royal Oak was third with 103.

Individual award winners were Tracy Peter of Dunsmuir and Eugene Clark of Spencer in the midget division and Leanne Pepper of Claremont and Mark Nairn of Spencer in the junior ranks.

Pro racing plan studied

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The first official step toward the formation of open — or professional — road racing, with as much as $100,000 in prize money for each event, has been taken with the creation of the Long Distance Running Directors Association.

At a meeting of representatives from 24 races throughout the U.S., plus athletes and sponsors, an eight-member steering committee was formed to study the possibilities and report back to the group.

Times News Services

Vancouver Whitecaps will give their rejuvenated scoring attack another test at East Ruthford, N.J., today when they tackle New York Cosmos in the title match of the Trans-Atlantic Challenge Cup soccer series.

Apparently cured of many of their early-season miseries, the Whitecaps were at their best Saturday when they got three goals from striker Trevor Whymark and blasted Manchester City of England 5-0 before 27,746 Vancouver fans to set the stage for today's clash.

Manchester City and Roma of Italy will meet in the first game of today's double-header at Giants Stadium.

The Cosmos have four points in the international series after defeating Roma 5-3 at home Saturday on the strength of three goals by Giorgio Chinaglia.

Vancouver, which won five of six encounters against the Cosmos, the glamor team of the North American Soccer League, has three points in the series they opened with a 1-1 tie Thursday night against Roma.

Striker Roy Hankin and overlapping defender Bobby Lenarduzzi scored the other Vancouver goals as the Whitecaps appeared to be recovering from a 4-6 NASL start that has left them one point out of the division cellar.

A key catalyst in the turnaround in the Whitecaps has been the play of sweeper-back Rudi Krol, the Dutch superstar who made his first start here against Roma and produced better communication between midfielder Alan Ball and his forwards.

Both Ball and Krol started several one-touch passing plays as the Whitecaps won their first game at Empire Stadium in more than a month.

Both veterans fired passes to wingers Carl Valentine and Gerry Gray to set up dangerous scoring attempts.

Whymark's two first-half headers and his second-half conversion of a cross by Gray added up to his biggest scoring binge since he scored both goals in Vancouver's 2-1 Soccer Bowl victory over Tampa Bay Rowdies last September.

Krol started the play that led to the first Vancouver goal with the game only eight minutes old as he controlled a ball at midfield and squared it to the right wing for Valentine to cross for a Whymark header.

The Whitecaps outshot the visitors 16-12 but made much more of their scoring chances Saturday night than against Roma.

Manchester's best scoring chance came in the first half and on the best of those, goalkeeper Bruce Grobelaar, making his first start in Vancouver, dived to his right to deflect a shot by Dennis Tueart wide of the far post.

"He's been playing well but just not getting the results until tonight," Vancouver coach Bob McNab said of Whymark's first three-goal performance in North America.

Good day for new pilots

By Canadian Press

Sporting new coaches, struggling Minnesota Kicks and Rochester Lancers showed sparks of brillance in North American Soccer League action Sunday.

Alex Perolli made a successful debut as he coached the Lancers to a 5-2 upset victory over Fort Lauderdale Strikers and the Kicks, with club president Freddie Goodwin as interim coach, defeated Detroit Express 4-2.

Rochester piled up a 5-0 lead before Francisco Marinho and Lew Schoenmaker scored for the Strikers, the leaders of the American Conference's Eastern Division who dropped to 8-3.

Victory moved Rochester, 4-4, into third place of the National Conference's Eastern Division ahead of Toronto Blizzard, who lost 3-0 to Chicago Sting on Saturday.

In other Saturday matches, Tampa Bay defeated New England 2-1, Atlanta edged Washington 2-1, Tulsa shutout Dallas 2-0, Houston blanked Memphis 1-0, Portland topped San Jose 2-1, Seattle beat Los Angeles 2-1, and San Diego nipped California 2-1.

Goodwin, who coached the Kicks to a 52-37 record during the club's first three seasons, was replacing Roy McCrohan. The triumph moved Minnesota, 3-7, into a third place tie with Atlanta of the National Conference's Central Division.

England regains form to blank Scotland 2-0

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — England returned to winning form Saturday by defeating Scotland 2-0 in the final game of the British soccer championship.

Northern Ireland clinched the title earlier, for the first time in 64 years. England placed second in the four-country tournament.

Northern Ireland finished with five points on two wins and a draw. England had three points. Wales and Scotland had two points each on one win in three games.

The victory, on goals by Trevor Booking and Steve Coppell, boosted England's confidence for the upcoming European Cup of Nations final in Italy.

Third quarterback acquired by Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have acquired a third quarterback with the signing of Rick Bashore, 22, a six-foot, 192-pound athlete who played at UCLA.

The signing came the day after veteran quarterback Jerry Tagge failed his pre-training camp physical and was placed on Canadian Football League waivers without right of recall.

Tagge, who joined the club in 1977 and led the Lions to a 10-6 record, injured his left knee last August. Surgery for cartilage damage was performed during the off-season.

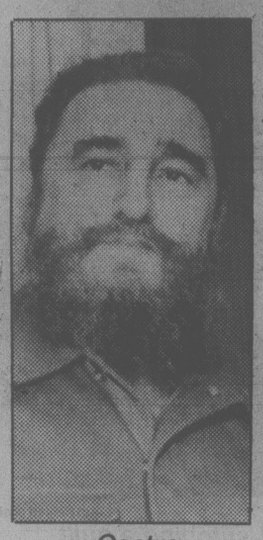
Says Marilyn Moats Kennedy, 37, author of Office Politics: Seizing Power, Wielding Clout: "Even if you are in favor, getting promoted often demands keen political acumen. Bosses lie about what they want. They use cliches. They talk about promoted people and say: 'Cream rises to the top.' I say, 'but so does grease.' They never tell you that."

Students in Brunswick, Maine dumped more than a million bottle caps — enough to fill 28 55-gallon drums — on a parking lot because they wanted to see how big a million is. Now they have to get rid of the caps. "From the mathematics perspective, the children had a conception of a number on the blackboard but they didn't know what it meant," said John Cullen, the math teacher who organized the bottle cap collection." Students at Brunswick junior high began their pursuit of a million bottle caps in September. "Now they know the time and effort involved in gathering a million of anything," he said.



Castro

On his office wall, Sunnyvale, Calif. mayor Larry Stone has a picture of himself talking with Fidel Castro and council doesn't like it. A motion made asking Stone to remove the picture, but was tabled on a 3-2 vote with one abstention. The picture, taken when Stone visited Cuba with a delegation of U.S. mayors, hangs with pictures of himself and other politicians — including Gerald Ford.

An explosion at a chemical plant may have generated enough fear in a woman living nearby to cause all her hair to fall out, a New Jersey appeals court ruled in ordering a new trial to determine whether Colleen Dolan of Clifton deserves "fright" damages because of the 1974 explosion at the Atlantic Chemical Corp. Mrs. Dolan, then 29, became hysterical when the explosion rocked pictures off her walls and lit up her living room with an orange glow from a mushroom cloud in the sky, 430 metres from her house. Three days later her hair started falling out. By June it was dropping off in handfuls and by September all her body hair was gone. "In scary situations, the skin reacts with goose pimples and fright can produce what are known as 'hairy experiences,'" her lawyer George Duggan told judge Michael O'Neill. She testified that since the accident she is frightened by noise, experiences difficulty in sleeping and is embarrassed by her baldness.

Dear Abby:

When I married Jim last year I was a divorcee with a daughter, 10, and a son, 7. Jim was also divorced, with two sons, 9 and 12. Jim's ex-wife has remarried and his children live with their mother, but we have them on weekends and vacations.

Abby, being a stepmother presents so many problems, I don't know where to begin. First there's the problem of discipline. I've always been very strict with my own children, but when I married Jim, I wanted so much for his children to like me, I started off treating them more like guests, which my children resented. Then when I laid down the law, my stepchildren said, "You aren't our REAL mother, so we don't have to mind you!" How does one handle that?

Also, on parents' visiting night at school, should my children's "real" father attend with me? Or should their stepfather attend? And on my stepchildren's visiting night, should I go with my husband, or should his ex-wife go?

Stepmother

Dear Stepmother:

Move over. According to the latest statistics, one out of every five children in the U.S. is a child of divorce, and since 85 per cent of divorcees remarry within five years, the number of stepparents is now multiplying like rabbits. And so are the problems.

About discipline: The tendency to start off treating one's stepchildren like guests is natural, so toughen up and let them know there is one set of rules for all the children, and that's that!

Dear Abby:

My husband of 25 years has been playing poker with the boys every Monday night for years. Every time I ask him how he came out he says, "I broke even."

Abby, I wasn't born yesterday. I know it's impossible to break even every time. Do you think he usually loses but doesn't want to admit it because he's ashamed?

Or do you think he usually wins but doesn't want me to know because he's afraid I might ask him to hand over part of his winnings?

Aaron's Wife

Dear Wife:

Probably both.

Dear Abby:

I am writing a paper on modern marriage and need your input. Judging from the letters you get, what are the most common complaints?

Madison

Dear Madison:

The wives' most common complaint: "My husband doesn't appreciate me."

The husbands': "She nags me."

John Bull in our howling wilderness

In the year 1908, there came on holiday to Campbell River an Englishman of a certain stamp. His name was Sir John Rogers, K.C.M.G., D.S.O., F.R.G.S., and later he wrote a book based on his experiences in the land of the rough-and-ready Colonials. The book, long out of print, is titled, Sport in Vancouver and Newfoundland.

By "Vancouver" Sir John meant Vancouver Island: he never did manage to get the distinction between the city on the mainland and this favored isle clear in his mind.

I bring this obscure and stuffily-written work to your attention for two reasons.

It illustrates the kind of sport that an angler might enjoy at Campbell River in that distant year. Also, it leaves us with a marvellously precise though entirely unintended portrait of the author. For here was John Bull in person . . . obstinate, arrogant, upper-crust, and very much inclined to look down his nose at our rude Canadian ways.

"In one respect they were all a hopeless failure," he writes, after giving the fish grudging praise for their sporting qualities. "They were quite unfit to eat. Why it should be so I cannot say. Perfect to look at, as good as any Atlantic fish, the flesh was like cotton wool, dry and devoid of all flavor."

But Sir John was generous enough to admit that the fishing at Campbell River was top-flight.

"The number of fish which frequent the Campbell River waters is almost incredible," he reports. "When it is realized that between one and two thousand salmon of the various kinds are collected daily by the cannery launch, and that all these have been caught with rod and handline — some idea may be formed of their numbers."

". . . There were but two prices: 50 cents for a tyee, no matter what his weight was, and 10 cents for each smaller fish."

Grumpy, outspoken Sir John, who seems to have lived in a state of constant friction with Billy, his long-suffering guide, was obviously a skilled and patient angler. He fished our strongly tidal Discovery Passage from a rowboat in weather up to and including a southeaster, and his catch figures, reviewed in the light of present fishing prospects, are impressive.

He filled in the interstices by gaffing spring salmon (he differentiates between these and the over-30-pound tyees) to the tune of 15 fish weighing a total of 274 pounds. He also took 126 coho, 38 cutthroat trout, and two grilse which he terms sea-trout.

A very satisfactory bag. Even Sir Roger, though notably quick on the trigger when it came to complaining, had no criticism to offer!

From Campbell River, Sir Roger went with guides whose number included the famed Cecil 'Cougar' Smith to hunt elk in the Nimpkish Lake country. It was on this hunt that the flood-gates of his growling and growsing were flung wide.

What he found was dense undergrowth so wet from near-continuous rains that to force a way through it was to live in a perpetual cold showerbath. Game animals, even though close, couldn't be seen. Sir Roger bashed a knee. Cougar Smith fell ill. All in all, the prospect was anything but pleasing.

Under a dripping cedar tree, by a smoky fire, with a sprained knee, Sir Roger longingly recalls an earlier hunt in Eastern Canada with its polite guides and genteel appointments.

"The table was always laid with a clean napkin," he mourns, "and an excellent dinner of soup, fish, stuffed ruffed grouse, deliciously cooked and well-served."

Carping but plucky Sir Roger did, however, bag himself a fine bull elk, or wapiti as he prefered to call the beast. Then he crossed to Kingcome Inlet and in spite of his bum knee, scrambled up a mountain and shot a mountain goat.

"The discomforts were forgotten," he records, "the sodden forest, the rain, the indifferent food and the poor sport, but the impressive scenery . . . will remain indelibly impressed on my memory."

It must have cost Sir Roger considerable effort, that good word about the scenery. But he forced it out, and for that, we crude Colonials must be thankful!

NINE BROTHERS, a dreamcoat and a fire truck add up to the hottest rock show in town say the promoters of Joseph and His Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat running Wednesday, Thursday and Friday this week at the McPherson Playhouse in Victoria. The rock opera, enacted by Spectrum Fantasy Factory of the Spectrum Community School, is being staged under the auspices of the McPherson Foundation. The musical is based on the biblical story of Joseph and the Coat of Many Colors. The work is the creation of Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice, who also wrote Jesus Christ Superstar. The local production is directed by Spectrum's Milt Wright. Showtime each evening is 8 p.m., with advance tickets at the McPherson.

Hazard in food feared

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government will consider changes in food policy after a survey found an overwhelming number of Canadians believe additives were a health hazard despite contrary scientific evidence.

The national survey of almost 25,000 people, conducted by the Health Protection Branch last summer and just released, found that 87 per cent were concerned about possible effects of additives on their health, said Health Minister Monique Begin.

In addition, 70 per cent felt additives did not improve the quality of food and 60 per cent said they would pay more for food without additives.

The survey also found 91 per cent of respondents wanted more information about additives. Most additives are used to maintain the nutrition of food, prolong its shelf life, make it more attractive to consumers or aid in processing.

"The message we received was that Canadians need and want to know more about the use and control of additives," Begin said. Few realized the extent of government supervision, she added.

"Manufacturers' use of additives is constantly monitored by my department," she said. "All proposals for new uses must undergo thorough scientific review for potential health hazards before being allowed on the market."

By DR. BOB YOUNG

The medical columnist is sometimes torn between being a writer and being a doctor. The following letter was received recently.

Dear Dr. Young:

J.H.

The part of me that does the writing recognizes that this reader has a question for which he wishes an answer.

In this case the answer is probably no — Gravol in this dosage will not have any adverse effect over a period of time. The common side effect of drowsiness, and less frequent dizziness may occur, as may dry mouth and other unusual symptoms.

If he or she was in my office I would be asking when the headaches started, what part of the head is involved, whether there is any variation from hour to hour, whether the vision is affected or not, and a host of other enquiries.

Are the headaches severe? (The writer does not say.)

A medical columnist often suggests that his correspondent check with his or her own doctor regarding a specific symptom or complaint. The reason for this is that it is virtually impossible for the author to express an opinion from the information given in a letter.

The patient cannot be examined, needed questions cannot be asked, and laboratory tests and x-rays are not available.

To do so would be both dangerous and unethical, as well as unwise.

Such letters as that sent by J.H. are intriguing, I must admit. I will wonder, for a while, just what might be the cause of his or her headaches and stomach upsets.

Info/Health is brought to you by the British Columbia Medical Association and the Victoria Times.

Dr. Young welcomes letters from his readers. Personal replies, however, are not possible. Write in care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

VON or NOV: either way spells help for needy

Let's turn the clock back for a moment to 1974. The year in which Victorian Order of Nurses was phased out and its work taken over here by the provincial government.

At the same time the VON auxiliary was formally dissolved and its 35 or more active women volunteers were out of work.

They refused to accept that ruling. Surely, they said, there was work somewhere they could take on as a group.

A meeting was held and a vote taken. The result was unanimous. The auxiliary would not die.

The name? They would turn the letters around to read NOV and call the group Needs of Victorians.

Within weeks a Needs of Victorians Society was formed as a non-profit organization.

Its main purpose to help, psychologically and financially, any charitable or non-profit agency within the Victoria area, in need of assistance.

Later, when the VON books were closed, a sum of money was given to the new group. It was invested and the interest used for various enterprises.

In its first 18 months NOVS assisted the Cystic Fibrosis Society Comfort Fund, the Red Cross Blood Clinic, Operation Track Shoes, Need Crisis Line and Arbutus Crafts.

It provided two projectors for the B.C. Heart Foundation; projectors and a screen for St. John Ambulance and dishes for the North Park Manor Society.

It also fully furnished the first aid room in Oak Bay Recreation Centre and placed a plaque on the door to commemorate services of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Since then help has been given to such organizations as the St. John Court Society, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Salvation Army, New Horizons, Village Crafts, Meals on Wheels, Canadian Cancer Society, Young Life of Canada, The Upper Room, Victoria Rape Relief, hard of hearing, handicapped, care of the dying and children with learning disabilities groups, and a host of others.

A bus was presented to the Juan de Fuca Hospital for its extended care work; an audio-visual unit to the Victoria General Hospital and a cafeteria was furnished in Nigel House, through the Van Isle Housing Association for Physically Handicapped.

Members have also knitted or crocheted 89 lap rugs for patients in the Juan de Fuca Hospital.

Lynne Mace, present head of the group, tells you that in the six years it has been active NOVS has made, through its many projects, and given away a total of $30,000.

Today the membership includes 30 women volunteers, in ages from 30 to 60, and with approximately a third of that number still active from old VON days.

Right now, in the home of a long-time member, Sharon Ireland, a few are hand-crafting a quilt in the pioneer way, with no hand stitching. When it is completed it will be raffled.

The money-making program also includes rummage, home cooking and nearly new clothing sales; an annual home-created fashion show; bridge teas and luncheons.

There's a NOVS cookbook in which the group has given favorite gourmet recipes for luncheons, informal and formal dinners.

Members do flower arrangements too, for the annual garden party at Government House, and recently they have taken on sale of a Regal magazine, in which any number of gift ideas are catalogued.

After listing all these activities and speaking of the demands they create, Lynne Mace adds that the enthusiasm and dedication of the members and their untiring efforts to help those in need, has increased with every project.

Postscript — Perhaps you know of a charitable or non-profit agency that could use NOVS help.

If so, do remember that all requests must be in writing, well detailed, and presented under a group name to Mrs. R. A. (Lynne) Mace, 1820 Beach Drive, Victoria, B.C. V8R 6J3.

On the other hand you might like to join this group as a volunteer. If so, its also Mrs. Mace that you contact.

There's work to be done and you may be just the person to do it.

OTTAWA (CP) — Fixing a gin and tonic with a twist of lime in the backyard can be a good way to get a bad sunburn, says Dr. Paul Lazar, vice-president of the Dermatology Foundation.

"There are lots of fairly common drugs and foods that will make some people extra-sensitive to the sun," said Lazar. "People mixing drinks and getting lime juice on their hands is one source of trouble."

The oil coming out of the peel is the problem, he said.

"Birth-control pills, excessive alcohol or anything we take that is detoxified in the liver can cause a sun reaction."

The reason for this, Lazar said, is that when the liver is busy processing alcohol or chemicals, it cannot take time to combine porphyrins with iron to make hemoglobin and these materials escape into the system, making a person extra-sensitive to the sun.

"If a person finds that he's burning after 15 minutes in the sun when he normally could take an hour, it may be that he's experiencing some kind of reaction. He should consult a doctor."

What's best: Senior? Old? or Elder?

What do you want to be called?

A year or so ago I discussed oldsters' objections to the terms "old age pension" and "old age security", based on their insistence that 65-plus no longer is synonymous with "old age".

I was flooded with recommended changes (many duplicates, of course) ranging from such straightforward proposals as "Retirement Security Pension" and "Government Retirement Pension" to more exotic suggestions such as "Vintage Years Program" and "Three Score Plus (TSP)".

Many suggestions included the word "Senior" (Senior Security, Senior Assistance, Senior Pension, etc.). Now a good many upper-age citizens are objecting to being called senior citizens.

"We are all citizens," writes Miss M.B., Toronto. "If we are to be so segregated, the previous age group should be called Middle-Aged Citizens and so on back to birth (Infant Citizens)."

"I read your stuff all the time and ain't nothing wrong with it," writes A.B., Owen Sound. "I'm fast approaching the day Ottawa starts sending me those 'old age' cheques and I'm darned if I want to be called 'old' or 'senior'. We all know that 65 ain't old."

What to do about it? At a meeting of 65-plus people the terms "older Canadians" (not "old" just "older") and "elders" were suggested.

I rather like the term "elder" although it might be a bit clumsy to use — perhaps only for a while until we got used to it. It has a venerable background being used in the early days of the Christian church (still used by Presbyterians) and as a term of regard ("Respect your elders").

And there is nothing really new about the use of the word "elder" to denote mature citizens. "The Elder Statesman" is the name of the official publication of Elder Citizens' Organizations in B.C.; it is a lively, informative paper now in its 21st year of publication.

In Manitoba, the Society of Seniors are asking readers of their good paper (Manitoba Senior Citizens' Journal) to come up with an alternative to "senior citizen" because some of their members do not like that term. I am sure they would consider suggestions from other provinces. Send ideas to Fred Wood, Box 34, St. James P.O., Winnipeg, Manitoba, R3J 0H4 (with a copy to me).

There is the other side of the coin. Some oldsters don't mind a bit being labelled "old" or "senior". E.K., Toronto, writes: "The fatuous use of euphemisms like 'golden age' and even 'senior citizen' bugs me. The term 'old age' is simple and honest. What's wrong with using it? Old age is a dignified, respected stage of life. A newspaper report refers to a 90-year-old man as 'elderly'; he's 'old' and that's that. Let's get rid of such nonsense."

So choose your side of this unofficial referendum. Let me know what you think.

My publishers tell me that my book Making the MOST of Your SENIOR YEARS now has received Canada-wide circulation and should be available in your public library (as well as at your bookstore). Ask for it.

quilting with Kathy Faryon

Home-on-the-range motif

This pattern was created by Barbara Kelcey to honor the city of Calgary, renowned for its annual Stampede, Chuckwagon races, and Stetson hats.

From New York to the West Coast, young children enjoy cowboy and western themes. This quilt design pattern uses a very simple stylized cowboy hat motif to create star shapes, and produce large empty areas for quilting the wagon wheel motif.

Barbara suggests making the cowboy hat motif with three shades of brown fabric; or, from fabric scraps, using a particular color scheme for each hat, e.g. a dark blue crown with blue prints for the brim sections. The wagon wheel motif is the element that finishes the quilt with style. You can enhance the simple applique with the more complicated quilting lines. The quilting should be done at least ¼ inch (6 mm) away from the cowboy hats so that each motif stands out on the fabric.

Dark brown quilting thread, such as perle cotton (size 8), creates a special effect when used for this design. If you make the hats in different colors, a contrasting shade of thread, such as navy blue or black, will highlight the quilting stitches. Whatever you decide, this COWBOY COUNTRY quilt pattern is sure to bring delight to its owner and fun to its maker.

Border tips: When planning your quilt, it is a good idea to think ahead to the type, style and color of the quilt borders you will be using. Borders add an important touch to your quilt as they frame and finish it.

Borders should not detract from the quilt, nor overpower it. The border design should harmonize with the general appearance of the quilt it frames. For examle, a quilt featuring dainty floral designs requires a dainty border, while a bold colorful pattern should have an equally bold border.

Often a border fits best when it is slightly larger than the blocks it frames. For example, a quilt with 12" blocks (30.5 cm) will need a 16" (40.5 cm) border.

Applique borders are attractive with applique quilts and pieced borders tend to look better on pieced quilts. If you don't plan to use either border, a quilting stitch design can repeat the motif from the quilt itself.

Try to separate the border from the rest of the quilt with a plain strip about 2 inches (5 cm) wide in one of the color used on the quilt. You may vary the quilting stitch design for contrast; a straight diamond border quilting design looks good with a pattern which is quilted in circular motifs.

Observe how other quiltmakers have made their award-winning or outstanding quilts and learn from their design choices. As a result, you can fashion your own ideas and be sure that you will be pleased with the results.

Disabled 'year' in 1981

OTTAWA (CP) — A committee to organize Canadian participation in the International Year of Disabled Persons in 1981 has been formed by the federal government and given $800,000 in financing.

A news released from the health department said Yvonne Raymond of Montreal, supervisor of client services for the Quebec division of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, and Percy Wickman, an Edmonton alderman and former chairman of the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped, will be chairmen.

The committee will have about 35 members representing organizations for disabled persons, service agencies, labor, business and provincial governments.

For new brides, some old wives' tips: A glass container inside a silver or pewter bowl will prevent decaying stems on fresh flowers from pitting the metal. You don't need fabric softener every time you launder towels, etc. Too much softener diminishes absorbing qualities and yellows fabrics. Chrome bathroom fixtures aren't likely to show water spots if you rub on a tiny bit of oil (vegetable or baby).

"Whatta bargain it is!" said daughter, showing off the winter velvet suit she bought on sale.

"Lovely — but is it acetate?" asked mother. She had just talked with the drycleaner about the flattened nap on the back of her older velvet skirt and jacket. Once acetate velvet pile flattens, said the drycleaner, you can't raise it.

The city farmer who claims his tools are older than his children says when buying hoes, rakes, etc., choose the ones with wooden handles showing a straight wood grain without knot holes – the knots weaken the wood. If you can afford only a spade or spading fork for turning over soil, choose the fork. It is easy to work with, doesn't turn over heavy clods and makes breaking small clods easier.

ALLEY-OOPS! It's not style that counts, but the "end" result, as is demonstrated by this youngster. She was spotted attending a birthday party at a Thunder Bay bowling alley.

He's given the short end

BOSTON (UPI) — In the last 18 months, 4-foot-3 Burton Gutterman says he been turned down for more jobs than he can remember. So he's going into politics and let the voters decide whether he's too short to work.

Gutterman, 27, a University of Massachusetts graduate was standing in front the statehouse selling pencils in a tin cup Thursday to dramatize his campaign against alleged height discrimination.

"I really just want to show my indignation to this whole system," he said, waving his brand new Massachusetts vendors licence. "I'm completely qualified to work."

"I've been reduced to selling pencils on a street corner for lack of something better," he said.

But Gutterman said he won't be peddling pencils for long. He plans to run for the Massachusetts House from Boston's Brighton section.

Why politics?

"I'm trying to show people what happened to me. I want to get off welfare. All I really want to do is work," he said.

Among the jobs Gutterman has applied for was a Boston police officer.

There is no height requirement to be a Boston cop, but the department turned him down last summer on grounds that he flunked the medical exam.

A spokesman said Gutterman was disqualified because of "recurring back problems and knee pain" and because he was afflicted with achondroplasia — defined as "a hereditary, congenital, familial disturbance ... resulting in a peculiar type of dwarfism."

But Gutterman said the only thing wrong with his legs is that one is shorter than the other from "running around in circles" trying to get work.

"They never had any intention of hiring me anyway," he said.

Gutterman, a psychology major in college, said he's also applied for work at "every branch of state government" in the past 18 months, but had no luck.

Gov. Edward J. King appointed him to a board investigating equal employment opportunity, but Gutterman said he quit because "it just doesn't pay any money, so I went to the King to talk."

Gutterman said the governor sent him to the Human Services Department, the largest agency in state government.

"I ran up against a brick wall," he said. "I was just as qualified as the rest, but I know I was turned down because of my height.

"I don't have a problem. It's a problem with other people," he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, may 27, 1980 By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on secret maneuvers, clandestine conferences, major domestic adjustments, dealings with Taurus, Libra and Scorpio natives. Get practical matters catalogued — strive for improved services. Keep health resolutions. Includes awareness of nutritional requirements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 10): Illusion and romance dominate intriguing scenario. Creativity, change, adventure of speculation command more-than-usual share of spotlight. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Get story behind the story. Check "confidential" sources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make fresh resolutions, based on "very recent" events. Emphasize security, improved safety measures, reaching agreement with older family member regarding long-range policy. Past investment is now due to pay dividends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message for valuable hint. Get rid of superfluous material. Give full rein to intellectual curiosity — ask questions, be open to suggestions. Short trip, involving relative, is likely to be on agenda. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New approach could bring money and love into your personal scenario. Be positive in your response to pioneering project — and to meeting people. A contact could lead to an introduction which could be the start of "something big."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on new deal, special acquisition, unusual "bargain" connected with home, security, design, older family member who came to your rescue in recent past. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Follow through on hunch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversify, experiment, realize you have friends working for you behind scenes. Social activity accelerates; you meet people capable of sensing your potential. Catch up on calls, correspondence and "legal forms."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance, fulfillment, prophetic dreams, wishes that come true — these dominate scenario. Aquarius, Taurus natives play key roles. Take a stand, define principles and policy. Your position is stronger than originally anticipated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One who is "in command" will make room for you at top. Know it, have necessary material at hand. Be ready for written reports, tests, change, travel and a variety of experiences. Gemini, Virgo and another Sagittarian figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make necessary changes, adjustments and purchases necessary to create more harmonious home atmosphere. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently — and so does the number 6. In affair of heart — you emerge "victorious"!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Alluring member of opposite sex could beckon. Protect self in emotional clinches. See situation in realistic light. No one can actually pull wool over your eyes — but you can do a good job of fooling yourself. Don't let it happen!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Legalities, commitments, responsibilities, "strong" relationships dominate scenario. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Permit close associates, partner, mate to demonstrate policies, theories. Hold your own fire — play waiting game.

IF MAY 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you attract people to you with their problems. You have humanitarian qualities and instincts — others sense this and seek your counsel. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You are loyal, dramatic, capable of graphically illustrating your meanings, needs and aspirations. December could be an outstanding month — for money and love. If single, 1980 could be your year of marriage. Married or single, you travel and find outlets for creative capabilities. There could also be an addition to family. In July, popularity increases — you'll have more social invitations than you can handle!

Blind mechanic amazes the boss

Statistics show 80 per cent of Canada's blind are unemployed, but he has managed to land a $7.40-an-hour mechanic's job at Toronto city hall.

Maurice Dinneen, Panteluk's supervisor, said he was amazed at the dexterity the Saskatchewan-born tradesman showed during an aptitude test last December.

"With an absolute minimum amount of instruction, Mr. Panteluk was able to recognize a 21-inch heavy-duty commercial Lawn Boy mowing machine, check it over to make sure it was functional, fill the fuel system, operate the controls and start the machine, to the amazement of all who witnessed," Dinneen said.

Blind since birth, Panteluk was accepted into a 40-week, small-engine repair course at Toronto's Centennial College in 1975.

He graduated with a tradesman's certificate the following year, but was unable to find work until 1978, when he was hired by a federally-sponsored building firm to work as a jack-of-all-trades.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

It was my original intention to personally acknowledge each and every expression of sympathy after the recent death of my dear husband, Vince. However, the numbers have been so overwhelming that it has become impossible. My heartfelt thanks to all for the beautiful cards, letters, prayers and many acts of kindness. Such warm tributes confirm what we have always known - that he was greatly loved and respected by all who knew him. Special thanks to Dr. David Linfern, McCall Brothers, St Partick's Parish and all the clergy. Also to the staff of Second Royal at Jubilee Hospital, particularly Nurses Morgan and Lane and Dr. Ripley for their tender care and concern for all of us during his final hours. Ida Clarkson & Family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

PERRY - In loving memory of our dear grandson Marc, who was taken so suddenly from us May 26, 1980.
No stain was on his little heart,
Sin had not entered there;
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.
He was too pure for this cold earth.
Too beautiful to stay.
And so God's holy angel bore
Our darling one away.

PERRY - In loving memory of our dear nephew and cousin, Marc, who was taken so suddenly on May 26, 1979.
So many things have happened.
Since you were called away.
So many timmes we've cried,
If love could have saved,
You never would have died.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we love you still.
Sadly missed and always remembered by your loving Aunt Gwen and cousin Kevin, also by Tony.

PERRY - In loving memory of my dear son Marc who was taken from me so suddenly on May 26, 1979.
It's been hard to lose you dear Son
And my tears will forever flow.
But with God's help, perhaps we'll understand
Why my dear Son had to go.
I feel your presence every day
Which helps my heavy heart,
Rest in peace dear Son, we really are not apart.
So sadly missed your loving Dad, Chris Perry.

Major quakes, after shocks hit Calif.

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Aftershocks rumbled through the middle of California today in the wake of two major earthquakes Sunday which rattled the state from San Diego to San Francisco.

Two persons were admitted to hospital with severe injuries as a result of Sunday's tremors. Several others were hit by falling objects, and one man fell through a window.

The quakes knocked down power lines, burst water mains, disrupted telephone service and caused rockslides throughout the area surrounding Mammoth Lakes, a popular resort 480 kilometres north of Los Angeles.

"Cars were bouncing on the ground," said Todd Jensen of Crowley Lake, about 25 km southeast of Mammoth Lakes. "Some of the people who live at the lake said their refrigerators were flipped over."

One big aftershock registering 4.7 on the Richter scale struck the Mammoth Lakes area at 5:25 a.m. today, the U.S. Seismographic Station at Berkeley, Calif., said.

No damage or injuries were reported in today's aftershocks, which seismologists at Berkeley said were occurring every two or three minutes.

Alex Cunningham, director of California's Office of Emergency Services, warned that aftershocks might continue for several days and said "people should take prudent action."

Sheriff Martin Strelneck said late Sunday that rescue teams were continuing to search the area for people stranded by slides. He said the quakes caused no major damage to the region's utilities or public buildings but did damage the roof of the local hospital.

The quake registered in California's major cities but there was no reported damage that far from the epicentre.

The first quake struck at 9:33 a.m. Sunday and registered about 6.0 on the Richter scale, said Patti Murtha of the U.S. Seismographic Station at Berkeley, Calif. After a series of aftershocks, the second quake hit at 12:45 p.m. with about equal or possibly slightly greater force, she said.

The quakes — and numerous aftershocks — brought an abrupt end to Memorial Day holiday activities at Mammoth Lakes.

"A lot of people are leaving town," said Shawna Horns of the Inyo County National Forest Visitor Centre. "The main road is jam-packed. The gas stations have long lines. All the stores are closed. Mammoth is basically closed."

He said the road to Convict Lake was closed due to the fear of more rock slides, and all 92 sites at the campground near Convict Creek were evacuated.

At the Mammoth Mountain ski area, lift chairs had to be evacuated by auxilary power, said Tony Romo.

"It shook the building pretty well but there were no injuries and just minor damage, just panes falling out of the ceiling," Romo said.

16,000 poised to flee fire

Times News Services

KENORA — Boats, private cars and a train were poised today to spirit 16,000 Kenora residents from the path of a forest fire burning ominously 22 kilometres from their northwestern Ontario homes, Mayor Udo Romstedt said.

To date, Kenora, 128 kilometres east of Winnipeg, has been a refuge for thousands of northern Ontario residents forced to abandon their homes to the onslaught of the many forest fires ripping through the province.

Now the front line in the battle against the fires stands just east of the town through which a steady stream of refugees still flows.

"Right now we are assisting others, and we hope we don't need assistance from others," said Romstedt. "If the winds shift to the east, we will have a more serious problem. Presently, a fire line is about 14 miles from the town of Kenora travelling with winds from the southeast."

A wind shift that provided respite to Kenora Sunday swept flames toward the Grassy Narrow Indian Reserve 80 kilometres to the northwest, forcing 450 people to flee in buses only hours before fire engulfed the only access road to the community. All 450 were taken to Kenora.

Overnight the township of Redditt and Ena, with a combined population of 250, got the order to evacuate.

"The people who came here Sunday from the Grassy Narrows band are leaving this morning for a residential school in Fort Francis (80 kilometres south of Kenora) — while the highways are still open — where they will have proper housing," Romstedt said.

He said Kenora residents were advised to keep their gas tanks full and to decide what valuables to take with them in the event of an evacuation.

"The ministry of natural resourses said we would have least 24 hours notice to evacuate, and I am sure that within that time we can manage," he said.

"We have numerous boats. If the highway should be completely cut off we still could get the people out by boat," Romstedt said. "We have a good airport as well which takes big aircraft.

"And, right now we have a train standing by in case of an emergency. We don't think we would be cut off to the west."

Kenora but fire officials say it may have done more harm than good. It was believed that lightning accompanied the rain and may have started more fires.

In Manitoba, 21 forest fires are out of control, the largest covering 190,000 acres (77,000 hectares) at Porcupine Provincial Forest near the Saskatchewan border. Provincial officials say the situation across Manitoba is generally stable after overnight rain.

B.C. forestry officials meanwhile say weekend wet weather has helped keep the province's forest fire situation stable.

Rain turns ash to mud pellets

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Unpredictable, violent Mount St. Helens steamed ominously today from a seven-hour weekend eruption that spewed gritty volcanic ash over thousands of square kilometres of the most populated areas of coastal Oregon and Washington.

A light layer of ash started to settle on parts of lower Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Lower Mainland late Sunday and continued today.

The main concentrations of ash drifting north out of Washington State are at high levels and are creating no serious low-level problems in B.C.

While the light fallout is not harmful to humans or animals, persons with respiratory problems should take the precautions they normally would follow when breathing in any dusty environment, provincial emergency program officials said.

For seven hours Sunday morning, the three-kilometre-wide gaping crater of Mount St. Helens fired away like a volcanic cannon, shooting ash as high as 14 km amidst lightning flashes.

No new casualties were reported, although scientists said the eruption was the most serious since the gigantic May 18 explosion that blew off the top 700 m of the mountain and claimed at least 32 lives.

Total volcano-related losses to state and private land in Washington state reached $970.8 million, Rhonda Brooks of the state department of emergency services, said Saturday.

Earlier, it was reported $500-million worth of federal timber had been felled by the blast. And fisheries experts estimate a $200 million loss to salmon and sports fishing.

In the wake of Sunday's volcanic activity, Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray extended the restricted zone around the mountain from 8 to 32 km, including the towns of Cougar and Yale, which were evacuated.

Winds carried ashes from Sunday's eruption over an area of about 31,000 square kilometres, including Portland, Ore., and the heavily populated area around Puget Sound in Washington.

Unsafe truck clampdown on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Sunday he is stepping up enforcement of safety regulations for all commercial vehicles in the wake of a report that more than 67 per cent of the trucks travelling B.C. highways have major safety defects.

"I ordered the inspections and I was astounded at the findings," Fraser said in an interview.

"We're going to do something about it."

He said additional mechanical inspectors will be hired, and he has asked weigh scale staff to increase mechanical inspections and pay more attention to security of loads on commercial vehicles.

"We've had too many very serious accidents recorded on our roads because of insecure loads."

Fraser also said he will push for construction of motor vehicle testing stations outside the Vancouver and Victoria areas.

The report, from surprise inspections, found that of 3,619 trucks checked, 193 were too dangerous and pulled off the roads, and 2,252 had major safety defects.

Queen Mum's birthplace faked

LONDON (UPI) — It was a week the British royal establishment would rather forget.

As a result of a parishioner's curiosity, a spokesman had to admit that no one knows exactly where the Queen Mother was born nor why her eccentric father gave false details when he registered her birth.

Everyone agrees the Queen Mother was born on Aug. 4, 1900, and that date will be celebrated all over the nation this year to mark the 80th birthday of one of the kingdom's most popular ladies.

But the Sunday Times claims her father, the heir of the Earl of Strathmore, not only missed the six-week deadline for registering a birth but put his historic name to a lie, risking the penalty of life imprisonment which in those days was the extreme penalty for falsifying an official document.

The earl — a fanatic for plum pudding which he reputedly tried to eat every day of his life — wrongly listed his daughter as born at St. Paul's Waldenbury, the family home in Hertfordshire.

The newspaper said a local parishioner noted that the program of birthday festivities for the Queen Mother did not claim St. Pauls Walden as her birthplace but only as the place she spent much of her childhood.

His curiosity led to requests for an explanation at Clarence House, the Queen Mother's home. A spokesman there told the Sunday Times the Queen Mother was actually born in London but refused to be more specific.

Nurses return to work

Provincial government nurses returned to work today after a tentative agreement on a new contract was reached Sunday.

Details of the proposed contract are not being released but one source said it provides for a 42.9-percent wage increase over 36 months plus some fringe benefits.

Both sides are recommending acceptance. Dates for ratification votes have not been set.

The 2,700 nurses went on strike May 16 after rejecting the terms of an industrial inquiry report prepared by Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court.

The agreement was reached late Sunday night after five days of negotiations.

Lawyer Allan Hope of Prince George was named mediator last Wednesday after both sides agreed to third-party intervention.

The Hutcheon report recommended a wage increase of 26.5 per cent over two years.

Social Credit majority whittled

The Social Credit government's working majority in the legislature was whittled even thinner today after Bill Ritchie (SC-Central Fraser Valley) entered hospital with a kidney ailment.

With Speaker Harvey Schroeder also on the sick list and Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson forced to take the Chair, that leaves 28 Socreds facing 26 NDP MLAs.

The government was embarassed earlier this month when the Speaker was forced to break a 26-26 tie vote.

Liquor union to join BCGEU

About 1,600 brewery, distillery and winery workers in B.C. are on the verge of affiliation with the B.C. Government Employees Union (BCGEU).

The workers broke away about two months ago from the Toronto-based Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers.

Talks with the 43,000-member BCGEU began earlier this month and a spokesman says agreement is close.

"We've pretty well reached agreement in principle," the BCGEU's Jack Adams said today.

"All we are are doing now is tying down some of the details."

Adams said it makes sense to have the brewery workers affiliated with the BCGEU because the union already represents the province's liquor store employees.

The BCGEU has not heard any opposition to the move, Adams said, adding that the union already represents between 5,000 and 6,000 private sector employees.

The brewery workers, members of three locals, one of them representing about 100 employees at Labatts' bottling plant in Victoria, initially sought a direct charter from the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) to set up their own independent union in B.C.

But union secretary John Langley said today that, although there has been nothing official from the CLC, he has heard there is opposition to that move.

The union hasn't time to go through a lengthy hassle, he said.

The employees' contracts expired April 20 and negotiations for a new agreement are under way.

The main reason the B.C. workers broke away from the national union was because the national body insisted on country-wide bargaining whereas the B.C. members favor local negotiations.

Figurehead from Irish vessel

Do you know anything about a ship's figurehead which used to be across from the Princess Mary Restaurant vessel on Harbour Street?

The figurehead is of a fair-haired woman dressed in a riding habit holding a single flower in one hand and it's still at the site you describe in the garden at Seaspan International Ltd.

It was removed for a short period several years ago so that the wooden figure could be covered with a protective coating of fibreglass because it was deteriorating, said a spokesman for Seaspan.

No information exists about who the figurehead represents, if anyone, although the barque was an Irish vessel.

It's in need of a new coat of paint, said the spokesman, but otherwise it's in good condition.

Figureheads were placed on boats for good luck. The custom reached its peak in the 18th century but then gradually died out.

By PAT DUFOUR

At 4:10 p.m. on Sunday Bruce Hedric finally did it.

Amid cheers of jubilation from the crew, Hedric's 50-foot cutter Warrior from Seattle crossed the Swiftsure finishing line in Victoria to win the City of Victoria Trophy for first boat home in the 136.2-mile sailing classic.

Race committee officials were today still sorting out finishing times for the Swiftsure boats and could not confirm whether or not Warrior has also won the Swiftsure Trophy for first overall-International Offshore Rule boat.

Frank Piddington, race comittee chairman, said so many smaller boats were crossing the finishing line together in stiff winds on Saturday evening and during the night that officials had difficulty sorting out sail numbers and, in some cases, identifying the boats.

He said committee members will have to check the finishing times and sail numbers with report cards handed in by skippers at the inspection station when they completed the race.

"Until this is done, the committee will not be in a position to clearly declare any Swiftsure winners," Piddington said.

There were good westerlies at the start as the flotilla of 267 Swiftsure boats and another 162 smaller boats racing the 75.6-mile Juan de Fuca race to Clallam Bay moved up the strait.

In the strong westerlies that built up later on Saturday Lol Killam's 73-foot ketch Graybeard from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club and Lynn Sommers and Alan Buchan's 12-metre Weatherly dominated the Swiftsure fleet.

But it was Weatherly that rounded the Swiftsure mark at 8:35 p.m., closely followed by Graybeard.

Shortly after midnight however, the winds dropped and boats were fighting a sloppy sea with little wind to help them.

It was then that Warrior and the other small boats began to gain on the giants.

Hedric said they managed to keep moving in the slop while the bigger boats were pitching up and down helplessly.

Sunday afternoon the westerlies piped up again and Warrior was on her way to victory.

Even as she crossed the finish line, however, the winds were freshening even more, making it possible for smaller boats to save the corrected time on their handicap and win the most coveted tropy of all, the Swiftsure Trophy for over-all handicap winner.

As Warrior was finishing, race officials were predicting smaller boats that might save their time on Warrior.

They included G. Anderson's Whistlewing from Seattle, Ron Hart's Defiance from Tacoma and J.E. Arens' Tomohawk from Balboa Yacht Club.

A Royal Victoria Yacht Club favorite, Ross Mathewson's Kotuku, had to retire from the race because of forestay problems and veteran campaigner Henry Kotkins of Seattle withdrew his 74-foot yawl Diamond Head during the dead wind period.

In the smaller Juan de Fuca Race, G. Duncan's Hagar of Seattle rounded the Clallam Bay mark at 5:35 p.m. and was first over the finish line at 11:05 p.m.

She won the San Juan Trophy for first IOR boat in division 5.

Thomas Hukle's Outlaw of Seattle beat Hagar on time allowance and won the trophy for first over-all IOR boat and the Royal Canadian Navy Trophy for first division 6 boat.

The Port Angeles Yacht Club Trophy for the over-all winner in Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet competition was won by A. Crowe's Demara from the Tiddly Cove Yacht Club. She also won in division G.

Roy Hingley's Romada of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club was the winning boat in division E while Bob Lefaux's Bad News from the Tiddly Cove Yacht Club was top division F boat.

Consumer Affairs Minister James Nielsen had words of encouragement but little else for delegates to the annual conference of Canadian Council of the Blind over the weekend.

But his audience at the University of Victoria sessions seemed pleased with Nielsen's promise to look at a problem with the Blind Persons' Rights Act administered by his ministry.

The act permits blind people to take guide dogs with them into places like restaurants and says the blind are not to be discrimated against because of the dogs when seeking accomodation.

In a letter to Nielsen before the conference the council outlined six incidents where blind people had been refused accomodation because of the dogs.

The letter called for the minister to amend the legislation so this type of discrimination would end.

"I was rather distressed to learn of this," said Nielsen.

"It's being looked at with the human rights branch to see which department is better able to handle it."

On other areas of concern outlined in the letter, Nielsen had less to offer.

In particular the council asked for all handicapped people to be included in the Human Rights Code of the province.

Nielsen said he would speak to Labor Minister Jack Heinrich, who administers the code, about such an amendment.

After the meeting Nielsen said he won't necessarily be able to support the inclusion of handicapped because he does not know what the complications are of such a change.

The minister said public awarness and understanding of the problems of the handicapped is very important but he said he was optimistic about the future.

"I sincerely believe we are progressing at a remarkably fast rate," he said.

Nielsen said he is pleased with the efforts made by groups such as the council and the handicapped in general.

But, he added, legislative change alone will not solve the problems.

"The fundamental need is for public understanding of the needs and problems of the handicapped."

Pair survive car's write-off

An 18-year-old youth and his 16-year-old girl friend escaped with only minor injuries when their car was demolished in a single-vehicle accident on Salt Spring Island early Sunday.

Ganges RCMP said Michael Larry Fraser, of Ganges, has been charged with driving without due care and attention as a result of the accident.

Construction soon to ease lack of vacant apartments

The apartment vacancy rate is still close to zero in Greater Victoria, but help is on the way.

A number of apartment projects either underway or in the planning stages will add several hundred rental, condominium and co-op units to the area's housing stock.

The biggest at the moment is Cedar Shores in Saanich, on Gorge Road West just past Tillicum. Some of the 260 units have already been completed and are available for occupancy.

But they're definitely not low rent. In this project on the water, two-bedroom suites are going for $440 to $530 a month and three-bedroom apartments are $570 and $580 a month. Only 10 one-bedroom units are planned (completion expected in October) and "they're pretty well spoken for," said a spokesman for the developer.

In Victoria, since the beginning of the year the city has issued building permits to a $750,000 31-suite apartment project at 406 Simcoe in James Bay and a 29-suite condominium development at 640 Montreal.

Several more projects are still filtering through the planning process and haven't yet been granted building permits.

Included in this category is Sam Bawlf's 57-unit $5 million luxury condominium on the Inner Harbor at Yates and Wharf. Application for a permit was made earlier this month.

At Foster Isherwood's 17-unit condominium project at 104 Dallas Road, which has been in the planning for nearly two years, construction is expected to commence this month.

The $1.5 million development will have a restaurant on the main floor.

At the lower end of the scale, the Victoria Innovative Housing Society is buying a three-acre piece of property near Cedar Hill and Hillside for a 30-unit co-op. Construction is expected to start later this year.

The Advisory Planning Commission and city council have also given preliminary approval to:

The addition of three apartment suites to the 116 rent-subsidized units for senior citizens in the 1700-block Cook (above Cubbon's building supplies).

Both require rezoning and will go to public hearings before council votes on the matter.

Subtracting from Victoria's apartment stock was another rezoning proposal. The 31 suites in the Valmar Apartments at 475 Quebec are to be changed to a motel, operated as an annex to the Royal Scot.

Islands fighting threat of link

A member of the Islands Trust warned Sunday that a fixed link with the Mainland will threaten the unique qualities of the Gulf Islands.

Kreis told about 100 persons at the Empress Hotel the desire to save the Gulf Islands isn't motivated by selfishness but by the wish to preserve them for the future.

Claudia Donato, who has launched a campaign against the scheme, hammered away at the fixed-link proposal, using facts and figures she's gathered in recent weeks to support her arguments.

The estimated cost of $2.5 billion, which she constantly refers to as $2,500 million, was her particular target.

She said the cost of doubling the B.C. Ferry system, including new ships, terminals and docking facilities, would be $614 million.

To recover the cost difference between doubling the ferry system and building any fixed link would take 269 years,

Donato said there will be a concerted push for signatures on an anti-fixed link petition this weekend at Hillside, James Bay Square, Mayfair and Sidney's Beacon shopping centres.

Gov't blamed for careless drivers

Harris Bredavs, of Young Drivers of Canada, doesn't think much of B.C. drivers but he lays much of the blame on the government for its approach to the problem.

In spite of recurring complaints from various provincial bodies about driving records and the cost of accident insurance claims, Bredavs says no one in the government cares enough to do anything.

Bredavs, who used to work for the Motor Vehicle Branch, said in some cases it even becomes a status symbol among young men to see how many points can be accumulated without having licences suspended.

He said he knows of people still on the road who have accumulated 30 to 40 points.

The province should institute a fine and point system, he said.

Enforcement should be tougher, too, says McCleave.

He said people begin by breaking the law in small ways — going five to ten miles an hour more than the speed limit. When they get away without punishment for that they gradually begin to disregard more and more traffic laws, he claims.

If a fine system was instituted and police were instructed to crack down more on minor traffic offenders the whole accident record of the province would improve. And it wouldn't cost more because fines would pay for the additional manpower required for enforcement.

The two men are also critical of the government's recent decision to eliminate a $50 refund that has been offered to encourage drivers to take a defensive driving course.

At the end of the year that refund will be wiped out, leaving B.C., Saskatchewan and Manitoba the only provinces in Canada that don't offer drivers some incentive to take defensive driving courses.

The government claims its surveys show that drivers that take the course have as many accidents as those who don't said Brevas.

But he doesn't like the way the government compiled its statistics saying that fault wasn't taken into consideration. For example, a driver whose car was in an accident while it was parked and the driver away from it would be counted as having had an accident in the same way an impaired driver who killed someone would be counted.

Bredavs admits the change will have an effect on his business but says that isn't the only reason he's complaining.

"Even if defensive driving courses were to be offered by the Motor Vehicle Branch it wouldn't make any difference — drivers should be given some incentive to take them."
